London Afire After Worst Air Raid

INVASION TRYOUT STAGED BY NAZIS

BERLIN, April 29 (INS)—German speedboats of the type long mentioned as participants in the invasion of England when it comes, launched an attack upon the southeast coast of Britain this morning, it was announced this afternoon.

Apparently under cover of a devastating barrage from German long-range guns massed along the French side of the channel coast, the speedboats raced in close to shore, the announcement said.

Several British speedboats of a similar class which attempted to head off the German craft were hit and damaged, it was said. Whether any other damage was caused in what was described as a "speedboat attack" was not disclosed.

All the German boats returned safely to their bases, it was said.

Big Berthas Heavily Bombard Dover Area

DOVER, England, April 29 (AP)—German big guns on the French coast cannonaded the Dover area with the heaviest and longest cross-channel shelling of the war today, and the British replied in a counter-bombardment and RAF raid on the Nazi emplacements.

After the Germans had fired single shells for three hours they stepped up the barrage, using four-gun and six-gun salvoes at intervals of about three minutes, then narrowed the time to one minute.

NAZIS IN SUNLIGHT

Flashes and columns of smoke spiralling upward across the sunlit channel showed the Germans' Calais batteries were delivering the attack. Calais is about 21 miles across the channel from Dover.

The shelling continued without letup after it had been in progress for nearly four hours. The last previous heaviest daylight bombardment of Dover was last fall.

Firstly there was an hour's lull, then the Germans began sending over a succession of single shells. Up until early afternoon no casualties were reported.

The bombardment developed into the most sustained cross-channel shelling so far this year.

All entrances into Dover were marked by yellow notice boards bearing the warning:

"Shelling in Progress—Take Cover."

Most of the German shells were of a high explosive type which

Lindy Row Stirs Charge F. D. Once Forecast Nazi Win

NEW YORK, April 29 (INS)—President Roosevelt's remarks which led to severance by Charles A. Lindbergh of his connection with the U. S. Army drew sharp criticism today from Amos R. E. Pinchot, who charged in turn that the President himself had once said that Germany probably would win the war.

Pinchot, a brother of former Gov. Pinchot of Pensylvania, made his charge in an open letter to Mr. Roosevelt. The President's asserted observation regarding Hitler's probable victory, he said, had been made to Sen. Sheridan Downey, California Democrat.

"May I remind you, Mr. President, that some time ago you told your friend, Sent. Sheridan Downew of California that Hitler's power was so great that, in all probability, Germany would win the war," Pinchot wrote.

"On June 13, 1940, after expressing regret that your administration had not heeded Col. Lindberg's advice to build a great fleet of military airplanes, Mr. Downey addressed the Senate as follows:

WHO WAS DEFEATIST THEN?

"'I might say that the President of the United States stated to me—and it is no violation of ethics when I say it, because he proclaimed it in the press—that the military power of Germany was so great that the overwhelming odds were in favor of Germany winning this war.'"

Pinchot continued:

"In making a low appraisal of Britain's chances of victory makes one a defeatist and a Vallandigham, who was the defeatist then, who the Vallandigham?" (Vallandigham was a defeatist in the Revolutionary War.)

Pinchot also quoted Secretary of the Navy Knox as remarking at the newspaper Publishers' dinner in New York last Thursday:

"'Hitler cannot allow our war supplies and food to reach England—he will be defeated if they do. We cannot allow our goods to be sunk in the Atlantic—we shall be beaten if they do."

"Did you ever hear Col. Lindbergh or Gen. Robert E. Wood, or any member of the America First Committee say anything as defeatist and old-womanish as that?" Pinchot added.

ASSAILS KNOX

"Secretary Knox says we are sunk unless England holds our noses above water. That is a fine announcement for the head of the Navy to make to the world, and especially to the officers and enlisted men in the service. And it is a fine thing for the President of the United States, who is commander-in-chief of both the Army and Navy, to endorse.

"May I add that this dinner, at which the guest of honor, Sec. Knox, virtually declared war on one foreign nation, while he proclaimed our dependence on another, was also unusual in that it began by rising and singing—not the Star Spangled Banner, but God Save the King."

NAZIS PUSH PURSUIT OF BRITISH; ISLE OF CRETE NEXT OBJECTIVE

BERLIN, April 29 (AP)—German forces have plunged into the southern half of the Peloponnesus in pursuit of retreating British and Greek troops, the Nazi high command announced today.

By all indications, Crete, Greece's largest island and now seat of her government and base for the British, is next in line for attack after the mainland mop-up.

The "mopping up," today's communique said, had progressed beyond Tripolis, in the heart of the Peloponnesus.

While Nazi land forces were in hot pursuit of the Allies, the high command said the Luftwaffe sank five ships aggregating 18,600 tons and damaged a number of smaller vessels in Greek waters yesterday in a relentless effort to cut off escape of the British expeditionary force.

In North Africa, the high command said, "new and considerable losses" have been inflicted on the British by Axis forces driving into imperial lines in the Salum region of Egypt, just across from the Libyan border.

Luftwaffe raids on Malta last night, it asserted, resulted in a direct hit amidships on a British cruiser of the Southampton class with a heavy-caliber bomb. A merchant ship and an oil depot were reported set afire.

Voelkischer Beobachter, Adolf Hitler's newspaper, declared "Crete no longer is a pleasant anchoring place for English warships."

The newspaper pointed out that

Landon Fears Gag, Urges Free Speech

TOPEKA, Kan., April 29 ((INS)—Alarmed by what he said was a "smear" campaign against Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and other spokesmen for peace, former Gov. Alf M. Landon urged the American people to launch a two-fold campaign for peace and to protect free speech.

He said the people must bombard the White House with letters that let President Roosevelt know "they still trust him to keep his campaign promises of peace."

The former governor, in an exclusive interview, also said they must fight for democracy at home by a demonstration of sentiment against "the smear campaign which has been levelled against every spokesman for peace."

Death Threat Letter Sent to First Lady

HOLLYWOOD, April 29 (INS)—A letter threatening her life has been received by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President, it was learned today, and as a result the Secret Service is taking extra precautions to guard her.

Mrs. Roosevelt was due to depart "for the North" this evening after lecturing in downtown Los Angeles last night.

The President's wife received the threatening letter at the home of Melvin Douglas, the actor, and his wife, Helen Gahagan, where she was a house guest during her Los Angeles stay.

SECRET SERVICE GUARD

The secret service was immediately notified. It was the first time, it was believed, that Mrs. Roosevelt has ever felt it necessary to invoke such aid.

Secret service operatives and a special Los Angeles police squadron threw a guard around the Philharmonic Auditorium last night as Mrs. Roosevelt spoke, and all persons entering the building were subjected to the closest scrutiny.

Exact contents and the signature of the letter were kept a secret and it was not disclosed whether the letter had been mailed or delivered by messenger to the Douglas house.

It was believed Mrs. Roosevelt would go to Hanford, in northern California, tonight but secret service operatives indicated her itinerary may be changed.

DID NOT PROMISE

Mrs. Roosevelt took a brief respite from her lecture tour yesterday afternoon, listening to a concert given at the Douglas home by the Los Angeles Youth orchestra.

In her question and answer period at her lecture last night, she was asked "do you think the President will keep his promise and keep us out of war?"

"He hasn't made any such promise," the First Lady replied. "He has said he wants peace. If it is possible to stay at peace, we will do so . . . but the ultimate decision rests with the people."

To another who said "tell the President we will not give our lives any place except in America," she declared:

"Any American who will not fight any place his country asks him to fight is not an American."

GROTON FIRE FIGHTER KILLED IN CAR CRASH

After fighting a forest fire in the Lost Lake region of Groton all night, one volunteer was killed today and two companions were critically injured when their car rammed a tree in Tyngsboro.

Police said Ronald Q. Small, 20, of Milford, N. H., apparently fell asleep at the wheel. The car swerved across the highway and crashed into a tree beside Route 3, near the Chelmsford line.

Small was killed. Two companion fire fighters, taken from the wreckage and removed to St. John's Hospital, Lowell, were William C. Sears, 21, and William Gibbons, 17, both of Milford.

FIRES BREAK OUT ANEW

Meanwhile, the forest fire, which blackened 21 square miles in its sweep from Dunstable to Groton broke out anew three times today and fresh blazes threatened a half-dozen other New England points.

Although all the fires were declared under control last midnight, conservation officials in Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Maine described the situation as "extremely dangerous" and declared the woodlands must remain closed to the public until at least a 24-hour rainfall period has passed.

More fair and warm weather was predicted for today and tomorrow. Not until the latter part of the week, observers say, will the skies become cloudy, and the amount of precipitation then may not be sufficient to end the fire menace.

The Dunstable-Groton fire, which came within less than half a mile of engulfing the Forge Village section of Westford, was the worst of six major woods blazes in Massachusetts, while an equal number destroyed hundreds of acres of forest in Maine and New Hampshire.

SOLDIERS TURN FIREMEN

Two thousand soldiers from Ft. Devens, every able-bodied man in Westford and Groton, students of Groton School and firemen from seven towns joined forces to check the Groton fire. Apparatus from as far as Lowell and Belmont assisted in battling the flames.

Today 15 forestry department fire trucks were still in use throughout the Groton fire area. Miles of surrounding territory were being patrolled by police and deputy for-

National Guard In for Year Only

WASHINGTON, April 29 (INS)—Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, has advised the House Military Appropriations Subcommittee that National Guardsmen now in federal service will be dismissed at the end of their year's training.

Chairman Snyder (D.) of Pennsylvania(termed as "absolute lie" reports the guard would be kept in more than the prescribed year. He said he had asked Gen. Marshall about this in a secret session yesterday and received positive assurances that the Army had no such intention.

Snyder said the military supply bill which his group will report to the House soon, will total more than $5,000,000,000.

Fritz Kreisler Shows Slight Improvement

NEW YORK, April 29 (AP) — A "continued slight improvement" in the condition of Fritz Kreisler was noted today by physicians at Roosevelt Hospital where the 66-year-old violinist was taken after suffering a fracture of the skull in a traffic accident Saturday.

A hospital bulletin said Kreisler had "not fully regained consciousness as yet."

CHINA DUGOUT HIDES SON JIM AS JAPS RAID

CHUNGKING, China, April 29 (AP)—Capt. James Roosevelt of the United States Marines arrived by plane today accompanied by Maj. Gerald C. Thomas for conferences with government leaders and announced they would go from here to Cairo to observe the British-Axis African campaign.

Three hours after his arrival Capt. Roosevelt underwent an air raid, International News dispatches revealed. Son Jim huddled in one of the inky black dugouts which the Chinese of Chungking have hewed out of the solid rock of the hills of the city. He spent an hour and a half in the dugout while nine Japanese planes raided Liangshan, to the northeast.

The President's eldest son received an enthusiastic welcome at the airport.

Replying to greetings from government representatives, he said:

"I bring the President's greetings to all in Chungking. Personally I consider being here a great privilege."

"I CAME TO LEARN"

Roosevelt later told newsmen he hoped to observe the African campaign as far as Ethiopia.

He said rumors he came to Chungking as an adviser were "entirely false; I came here to learn."

The captain added that he and Maj. Thomas were particularly interested in observing military ordnance and transportation.

The United States attitude toward China, he asserted, could be described best by the phrase:

"We won't let our friends down."

He had an engagement with Gen. Chiang Kai-shek to present a written message from President Roosevelt this afternoon.

LUNCHES WITH U. S. ENVOY

The American visitors met Chinese Finance Minister H. H. Kung this morning and lunched with United States Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson.

Tomorrow they will fly to Chengtu to meet Gen. Chang Chun, governor of Szechwan province, and also to visit the national military academy there. They will return for dinner tomorrow night with Foreign Minister Wang Chung-Hui.

Accompanying them on the flight today from Hongkong was Maj.-Gen. Dennys, British military attache.

Capt. Roosevelt Assigned to London

WASHINGTON, April 29 (INS)—In a further striking gesture of friendship and good will toward embattled Great Britain, the American government has assigned Capt. James Roosevelt, elder son of the President, to London, it was reported today in authoritative government quarters.

The President's son, a captain in the United States Marine Corps, will go to the British capital for duty as assistant naval attache in the American embassy, these sources stated.

Gasoline Up Another Half a Cent Today

Gasoline jumped a half a cent a gallon today at virtually all service stations in New England.

In notifying stations of the immediate increase, the major oil companies termed the increase as due to an advance in the price of crude oil.

HUB HIGHWAY-SKYWAY BATTLE LINES DRAWN

After original salvos in behalf of Boston's proposed $19,400,000 highway-skyway traffic route, proponents today drew up their heaviest guns for renewal of the battle next Monday before the legislative committee on cities.

An imposing array of organizations were on hand for the first skirmishes, while opponents of the project numbered several mayors of outlying cities.

Even after renewal of the hearings on Monday it was considered likely that additional time would be needed to hear all who wish to appear in behalf or in opposition to perhaps one of the greatest issues to come before the Legislature in 1941.

DEFENSE NEED CITED

Sponsored by Mayor Tobin, the proposal, designed to facilitate commercial, defense and private transportation in Boston, was declared by Corp. Counsel Roger Cutler to be of great importance to motorists and commercial interests throughout the State. Chief feature would be overhead highways linking main north and south arteries.

He said that rapid motor transport access to and across Boston was essential to effective functioning of the Army Base in South Boston, Fort Devens and Camp Edwards, the Charlestown Navy Yard and the Navy Dock, largest in North America.

"Boston serves as the ocean gateway to the whole state," he said, "and substantially all marine traffic for Massachusetts is landed at Boston wharves and transhipped by rail and motor trucks to the state's cities and towns."

SHATTUCK LEADS FOES

Under the bill the project would be financed over a 20-year period by state funds raised by gasoline tax, and construction and expenditures would be directed by a three-member authority, two members of which would be appointed by the governor and the third by the mayor of Boston.

Those who favored the bill were the State Planning Board, Boston Chamber of Commerce, State Federation of Labor, Congress of Industrial Organizations, Motor Truck Club of Mass., Mayors' Club of Mass., Mass. Selectmen's Ass'n, Building Trades Council and the American Automobile Associated Clubs of New England.

Opposing the measure, Henry L. Shattuck, city councillor and former chairman of the House ways and means committee, said the project did not merit priority and the labor, steel and other materials necesary for its construction were needed immediately to build guns, planes and ships.

He said that no step should be taken to tie up the gasoline tax revenue on the ground that it would be needed for unemployment projects "when the inevitable reaction to the present feverish spending comes."

Meanwhile, the Republican majority of the ways and means committee for the first time this year turned down a Saltonstall proposal when they reported adversely on the bill to purchase for $10,000 an airport site at Bedford.

Although the project was urged so the government would spend $229,000 to construct the air field, its opponents declared that the $10,000 was not a fair estimate of what it would cost the State.

It was declared that the cost of the land eventually needed and the drainage would run nearer to $35,000.

KELLY URGES COURT RULE ON EL DEFICIT

Gov. Saltonstall and the executive council today were requested to ask three pertinent questions of the Supreme Court before taking any action toward paying the "questionable and unproven deficit" of the Boston Elevated for the year ending March 31.

The request was made in a letter from former Lieut.-Gov. Francis E. Kelly to the Governor and councillors, which revealed that in the last few days Kelly has received more than 8000 letters enrolling the writers in the newly-formed Boston Elevated Passengers and Taxpayers' League.

THREE QUESTIONS

Kelly propounded these three questions for the Governor and council to ask the high court:

"1—Does Governor and Council have to approve warrant for payment of the last annual claimed Elevated loss of $2,341,167 if such loss has been determined by improper charges to cost of service, depreciation and capital accounts?

"2—Has Governor and Council the right to investigate the written report of the State-appointed Boston Finance Commission which recently claimed that the Boston Elevated has overcharged the public over $20,000,000?

"3—Does Governor and Council have to approve this warrant if an impartial examination and audit of the books and records shows that the Elevated made a profit for the year ending March 31, 1941, instead of its claimed loss?"

FALSE OVERCHARGE

In his letter, Kelly said further:

"If these important and pertinent questions are asked, I am certain that the impartial and learned lawyers comprising our highest court will reply that Your Excellency and the Governor's Council can withhold the approval of the payment of this claimed deficit until you have had ample opportunity to completely investigate this claimed loss, as well as study and take proper action on the Boston Finance Commission's public report, which states that the Boston Elevated has falsely overcharged the public over $20,000,000 in claimed losses."

Court Ruling Sought On Birth Control Bill

Thirteen members of the legislature took initial steps today in a move to obtain from the State Supreme Court a ruling on the constitutionality of the initiative petition for birth control legislation.

The group based their proposal on a constitutional provision which excludes from initiative petition matters affecting "religion, religious practices and religious institutions."

It was pointed out in this connection that spokesmen for the Catholic Church have appeared at hearings in opposing birth control.

The move for the high court ruling was expected to reach a legislative vote later in the week.

At the same time the Massachusetts Mothers' Health Council, which obtained 44,565 signatures on the petition for the birth control legislation, issued a statement welcoming the court ruling.

However, they expressed regret that "any religious question should be raised."

Mrs. Walter E. Campbell, the council's president, said:

"The proposed legislation would simply establish the right of physicians to provide, and therefore indirectly the right of married women to obtain, contraceptive care for health reasons. No physician and no parent would be required to do anything in violation of their personal beliefs."

The proposal for the court ruling was backed by Senators Blanchard, Bowers, Montmeny and Santon and Representatives Bessette, Cutler, Dooley, Kaplan, Law, Lerche, Patrick, Sheridan and Caughan.

Death of Edwards Soldier Under Probe

Col. Roy W. Smith, commander of the 181st Infantry at Camp Edwards, today appointed a special board to investigate the death of Supply Sergt. Forrest N. Gelinas, 31, of Orange, victim of a bullet believed by military police to have been fired by his own hand.

Sgt. Gelinas was found unconscious in his bunk at the Co. F supply room and died a few hours later at the Cape Cod Hospital.

Word of the death, first of its kind among the 25,000 troops at Camp Edwards, came at the same time that Pvt. Joseph B. Savage, 22, of Greaton rd., West Roxbury, succumbed to injuries received in a Wareham auto crash which claimed the lives of three other soldiers last week.

Meanwhile, Camp Edwards officials studied plans for transforming Scussett Beach, on the mainland side of Cape Cod Bay, into a bathing resort for the soldiers. Despite protests by Bourne police on the grounds that traffic jams will be created on the Canal bridges, acquisition of the beach by the State has received the approval of the legislative harbors and lands committee.

Gov. Saltonstall and members of the military affairs committee of the legislature completed inspection tours of the camp and saw heavy artillery in action. Another inspection was made by Maj.-Gen. Thomas A. Terry, commanding general of the First Corps Artillery and in charge of coastal defenses from Portland, Me., to New York.

A touch of glamor was added at Camp Edwards today by the arrival of six Boston debutantes to discuss with Maj.-Gen. Roger W. Eckfeldt plans for a Yankee Division benefit dance at the Ritz-Carlton on May 16.

The feminine visitors, Mrs. Ann S. Clement and the Misses Lucy Cochrane, Ruth Robb, Diana Bird, Eleanor Frothingham and Elizabeth Sears, were scheduled to be guests at lunch at a soldiers' mess.

At Fort Devens, today's important event was a huge movement problem, involving the convoying of a combat team of more than 6000 men of the 26th Infantry on motor vehicles over a 75-mile route, in less than half a day.

Using transport trucks, midget "blitz buggies," motorcycles and numerous other pieces of motor equipment, the troops will travel through Waltham, Needham Heights, Medfield, Sherborn, Cochituate, Wayland and Concord.

Mystery Is Solved, Mother, 68, at Peace

SPRINGFIELD, April 29—A 68-year-old mother, Mrs. Alice Covey of Albany, N. Y., was Springfield-bound today—her hopes and prayers of the last 11 years now answered.

She is the mother of Mrs. David Lee, who with her husband and three children, had been sought since December, 1930, until their skeletons were pulled from a submerged automobile Sunday at Water Shops pond.

"Now I know where she is—waiting for me," Mrs. Covey said. "I asked God to spare me until I knew. Now I know and I am ready to go.

"First I am going to Springfield to do what I can to help."

Meanwhile, a sharp turn in the road around the pond was blamed for the drowning tragedy which went so long undiscovered.

Medical Examiner Charles J. Downey said the drownings undoubtedly were accidental.

Trapped in the machine in the plunge were Mrs. Lee, her husband, a wounded World War veteran, and their children, Gannella, 8, Louis, 6, and David, Jr., 4. A drainage project lowered the pond many feet and disclosed the rusty automobile and the skeletons of the victims.

Schenck Files Sentence Plea

NEW YORK, April 29 (AP)—Joseph M Schenck, chairman of the board of 20th Century-Fox Film Corp., and Joseph H. Moskowitz, his Eastern representative, appealed their conviction for income tax evasion.

A notice of appeal, filed in Federal Court, was expected to defer their surrender to serve prison terms. Schenck is under three years' sentence and Moskowitz a year and a day. They had been ordered to surrender by May 12.

The defendants objected to Judge Grover M. Moscowitz' refusal to dismiss each count of a four-count indictment, and to his action in "sustaining the objection of counsel for the Treasury Department to the right of the defendants to elicit testimony from Internal Revenue agents."

RODEO COWGIRL-AVIATRIX HELD AS KILLER

HOUSTON, Tex., April 29 (AP)—A dark-eyed, pretty cowgirl, Lucyle Richards, was charged with murder today in the shooting of Frank Y. Dew, 48-year-old ranchman and rodeo official.

Mrs. Grace Collins, a divorcee, was in Dew's apartment at the time of the shooting.

Miss Richards, 31-year-old aviatrix and trick rider, whose feats had thrilled rodeo audiences over the United States, gave this account of the affair in a statement t. Detective Capt. George Peyton and newspapermen:

She called Dew twice and he asked her not to visit him, saying he was busy on a cattle deal. She put a pistol in her purse and drove to his apartment.

"I went to the kitchen door, which generally was unlocked," she said. "Frank had the night latch on. He came into the hall pulling the door closed. We got into an argument.

"I asked him if he had someone else in there, and he said, 'That is none of your business.'

"Then he shoved me.

"I tripped and when I got back on my feet and got my balance, I heard a noise like an explosion. Then Frank slapped me, knocking me down the stairs. I jerked the door open and ran toward the garage.

"While I was running, I realized I had my gun in my hand and I dropped it in the vicinity of the apartment."

12 Firemen Felled In Warehouse Blaze

WORCESTER, April 29—A dozen stricken firemen today were reported out of danger in a blaze which destroyed a furniture warehouse and damaged an adjoining apartment block with loss of $75,000.

The dozen felled men were the most seriously affected of some 40 firemen who suffered ill effects from blinding billows of smoke.

Starting in the warehouse, the flames quickly raced through the structure and then spread to an apartment block between 85-91 Green st.

Among those aided from the latter building was an 83-year-old woman, Mrs. Mary O'Brien, who was taken down five flights of stairs by Patrolman George Rafferty.

Heavy smoke settled over a wide business area and traffic was rerouted for several hours until the flames were brought under control.

Because of the heavy punishment suffered by smoke, firemen worked in relays, fighting the blaze from close up for only a few minutes at a time.

Measles Quarantines Fort in Harbor

A lone case of measles at Ft. Dawes, Boston Harbor, today resulted in cancellation until further notice of all social activities at the fort, including the weekly dance tonight.

Servicemen Given Reduced Rail Rate

WASHINGTON, April 29 (AP)—The Interstate Commerce Commission authorized railroads to carry members of the nation's armed forces at a rate of 1¼ cents a mile, instead of the regular two-cent rate.

WEST ROXBURY ASSURED OF VETERANS' HOSPITAL

A $1,500,000 Veterans' Hospital in West Roxbury was assured today after the City Council, ending a long controversy unanimously decided to sell land for the project to the government for $40,000.

The decision came suddenly, in the midst of a demand to hold out for $60,000, when it was reported that many communities had offered the government free land if they could get the hospital.

The Council's unanimous vote ended victoriously a 15-year battle by representatives of the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars for the establishment of a diagnostic veterans' hospital in this area.

Leaders in the long battle, both of whom addressed the Council in executive session, were Coleman C. Curran, of West Roxbury, departmental adjutant of the Legion, and Francis X. Cotter of South Boston, chairman of the hospitalization committee of the VFW.

RULES WAIVED

In tribute to their efforts, the Council waived its rules to permit Curran and Cotter to remain present while the vote was taken which approved the sale order.

The veterans' spokesman told the Council there are 74,000 Spanish and World War veterans in Boston and that the nearest diagnostic hospital available to them is in New York.

After Curran disclosed that the City of Brockton had offered a 125-acre site free and urged them not to let a dollar sign interfere with the opportunity to have a hospital in Boston, the Councilors abandoned a plan to attempt to raise the price of the site to $60,000.

According to Cotter, the federal government plans to break ground for the new hospital about May 15.

AIDS NATIONAL DEFENSE

To bolster National Defense, Mayor Tobin sent to the council an order calling for the leasing of the North Ferry, on the East Boston side, together with land in the vicinity and a portion of Border st., to the U. S. Navy for a five-year period at $1 a year. The action would result in doubling facilities of the Lockwood Basin, operating at peak schedule in outfitting and repairing small Navy craft.

Also in line with national defense was an order permitting construction of a tunnel connecting Massachusetts Memorial Hospital with the East Newton st. armory, which was referred to the committee on public lands. The city holds title to 1104 square feet of land between the two buildings.

25 Driven Out, 6 Safe in 2 Fires

An eight-month-old baby was overcome, 25 persons were driven to the street, six others were carried over ladders, and a policeman was injured in fires which caused $8500 damage in Roxbury and Somerville.

In the Roxbury fire which destroyed a three and one-half story dwelling in Tremont st., Patrolman Daniel Phillips of the Roxbury Crossing station fell from a first floor ledge after he and another officer rescued James Cook, 62, and his wife, Mary, 54, trapped in their second floor apartment.

Carried from the third floor were Charles Trask, 70; his sister, Effie, 68; their nephew, Frank Sullivan, 22, and Frank Dunn, 58. At the height of the blaze firemen were threatened by a hot air explosion which blew out all the windows.

In the Somerville fire which caused $500 damage to a four apartment dwelling in Oak st., Victor R. Mangiacotti, eight months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Mangiacotti, was overcome. All other occupants of the house were driven out.

COAL MINES TO REOPEN IN 24 HOURS

WASHINGTON, April 29 (AP)—Resumption of soft coal production within 24 hours was forecast today after southern operators accepted President Roosevelt's plan for breaking the soft coal wage impasse and unexpectedly tossed in a $1-a-day pay boost pending a final contract settlement.

The end of the month-old deadlock was buoyant news to worried defense officials.

The soft coal mines in the eight state Appalachian area and outlying districts which produce approximately 11,000,000 tons a week, were expected to go back into production as soon as John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers Union and the northern and southern producers can complete the details for getting miners back into the pits.

The break in the coal wage controversy which has kept the mines shut since April 1 came late last night when Presidential Secretary Stephen Early announced that the southern operators had accepted a proposal by the President to reopen the southern mines and negotiate a wage agreement with the UMW on a retroactive basis to the date of resumption.

DECISSION SURPRISE

The decision of the southern operators to put a $1 a day wage boost into effect at once—raising the southern rate from $5.60 to $6.60—provided a surprise to most of the mine union officials since the President had not asked for any wage change in his back-to-work proposal a week ago.

The decision of the southern operators was reached after a night conference which followed a visit with Commerce Secretary Jesse Jones and a Senate committee inquiry into the cause of the mine shutdown.

As one operator explained it, the Commerce chief told the southern producers bluntly that "something has to be done and done quickly."

The northern producers and the UMW, already in agreement on a new $7 a day wage scale, had announced their readiness a week ago to accept the President's reopening plan, which provided that the Northern mines reopen on the basis of the agreement already worked out.

The southerners' decision to reopen the mines and send some 400,000 coal diggers back was made known in the following message to Mr. Roosevelt from L. Ebersole Gaines, chairman of the southern group.

"The undersigned representing the 13 southern (coal) districts which have not yet negotiated a wage agreement accept your proposal without equivocation. We are ready to resume work immediately."

The President replied in a message to Gaines:

"I am very happy to receive your telegram of acceptance and copy of a letter to Sec. Jones that you will pay $1 a day additional. I sincerely hope in the interest of immediate continuation of national defense production that the mines can be reopened at the earliest practical hour."

A separate letter to Jones from the operators contained the announcement that the southern basic rate would be hiked $1 a day and that relative increases would be made in piece work.

There was no immediate comment from Lewis but his associates pointed out that the UMW had already gone on record with an acceptance of the White House proposal.

Southern operators explained that they voted to put the $1 a day wage boost into effect immediately by saying that it would reduce their contingent liability if and when further negotiations with the union should result in a higher wage rate and thus higher production costs.

AIMS AT $7 A DAY

The union is aiming for a $7 a day basic wage in southern mines to match the $7 rate granted by northern producers, and thus wipe out a 40 cent differential which has been one of the major stumbling blocks to the completion of a two year wage agreement covering all soft coal mining. Under the contract which expired April 1, the north paid $6 a day.

Thus the 40 per cent differential issue still faces the union and southern negitiators on a retroactive basis, along with other features of the northern agreement which southern producers said they found objectionable.

The acceptance of the President's reopening plan came in the wake of reports that steel production was being cut because of lowering fuel supplies, and railroads were reported running short of coal for transportation service.

Girl's Cries Rout Intruder In Bedroom

Awaking to find a man prowling in her bedroom, 15-year-old Phyllis Russell of Boston st., South Boston, routed the intruder by screaming for help early today.

The sound of an overturned chair falling aroused the girl. Silhouetted against her window she saw the man's figure.

Her cries woke up her father, William H. Russell, who ran from an adjoining room just in time to see the stranger leap out his daughter's bedroom window. The girl's room is on the first floor of the Russell home.

Her father, barefoot and clad only in his pajamas, chased the prowler four blocks along Boston st. toward Andrew sq., but lost sight of the man in the vicinity of Howell st.

Police from the South Boston station and officers of the headquarters detective squad searched the area but found no trace of the stranger.

MINE INSPECTION VOTED

WASHINGTON, April 29 (AP)—The House completed congressional action on legislation authorizing the government to inspect coal mines regarding health and safety conditions and accidents.

WARSHIPS BLASTED

The RAF raided the Nazi battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau at Brest last night for the 12th time in a month and a well-informed source said the vessels still were in the French port because they were so badly damaged the Germans couldn't move them.

The British officially have claimed only one hit on one of the 26,000-ton men-o'-war, but this source said their continued presence in such an accessible port to the RAF was proof enough that there had been more.

The likely thing for the Germans to do, he asserted, would be to move the powerful raiders the minute the British showed they knew where the ships were. He recalled that the German cruiser Hipper "disappeared" from Brest after she was bombed a second time by the RAF on March 2.

Several air ministry communiques have claimed that British bombs straddled the warships, one of which is in drydock and the other tied up beside a wharf.

The German air force, in turn, concentrated the weight of its night raiding upon Plymouth with a two-hour attack in which the government said "some fires were started, but casualties are not believed to have been heavy."

One invading bomber was reported destroyed.

Thousands of fire and oil bombs were showered by the Germans on Plymouth.

BATTLE OF ATLANTIC

The Lutwaffe's heavy pounding of Plymouth and the naval base of Portsmouth on the south coast recently was seen here as another intensified round in the Battle of the Atlantic.

British anti-submarine warships —destroyers, corvettes and motor speedboats—lacking Irish ports used in the last war, are believed to be using these well-equipped bases.

Plymouth and Portsmouth, which appeared comparatively safe from bombing in pre-war days, now are just 100 miles from German-occupied continental territory.

The Germans apparently are countering Britain's big anti-submarine and anti-raider effort by trying to knock out these bases.

Britain's reply has been a dozen raids on the German battleship surface raiders Scharnhorst and Gneisenau, now holed up at Brest.

BERLIN, April 29 (AP)—German bombers carried out a highly effective raid on the English port of Plymouth during the night, setting large fires in the harbor area, informed sources said today.

Nazi airmen raiding waters around the British isles last night sank a 5000-ton merchantman east of Dundee, Scotland, and set a 4000-ton vessel afire, DNB (German official news agency) reported.

MEDITERRANEAN BATTLE GROUND—With the campaign in Greece all but finished, Germany today became a puzzle as Allied leaders sought some clue to Hitler's next plans . . . whether he would augment his armies (1) at Solum, Egypt, for a drive toward Suez, whether he'd (2) smash over Turkey and the Dardenelles for a sweep through Syria, or whether he would push on Gibraltar (3) through Spain. The shaded portions of the map are under Axis control.

NAZIS AIM TO CHASE GREEK GOVERNMENT OUT OF CRETE

every mile of the Nazi advance across the Peloponnesus brings Crete, with its big Suda Bay naval base, into closer and more effective range of Greek-based German bombers.

(The long, narrow island extends from 70 to 160 miles southeast of Laconia, the nearest part of the Peloponnesus. Suda bay is 100 miles from Laconia

Greek Premier Emmanuel Tsouderos declared at Canea, Crete, yesterday that Greeks would fight on from there. "Destiny," he said, "has chosen two islands as the last but worthy ramparts of the free peoples of Europe: the great island of Britain and the great island of the Hellenes."

FLYING TIME CUT

Informed sources said Crete, in German hands, would spell the greatest danger to British near-east strongholds — to Alexandria and Port Said in Egypt, and to the Suez Canal. They said the flying time for Nazi long-range bombers operating against Egypt now from Sicily would be cut by more than half once Crete were available to the Luftwaffe.

Germans already were talking of new tasks in a larger sphere for the Nazi forces. Although these new tasks have not been specified, a military spokesman predicted yesterday that action in the Mediterranean theater would continue. He said conquest of Greece was regarded as only a phase of a larger plan now unfolding.

IMPORTANCE STRESSED

German military reports from Greece said German troops, cooperating with the Reich's naval forces, occupied the island of Thasos, in addition to the Aegean islands of Samothrace and Lemnos off the Aegean mouth of the Dardanelles. Thasos lies nearer the Greek mainland than the other two, and farther from the Turkish-guarded sea gate from the Aegean to the Black Sea.

It still was not specified what naval forces were involved in the operations.

German newspapers stressed the importance of Samothrace and Lemnos particularly. They pointed out the bay of Moudros, Lemnos, served as a British naval base during the World War. They added that it was from Lemnos that the World War Allies started the campaign in which they tried to take the Dardanelles—an attempt frustrated by combined German and Turkish efforts.

Sollum Falls to Axis, Battle for Suez On

By W. P. SAPHIRE
International News Service Staff Correspondent

CAIRO, April 29—Capture of Sollum on the Northwestern Egyptian coast by combined Italo-German forces led to belief in Cairo today that the major battle for possession of Egypt and the Suez Canal is now in full swing.

Authoritative Cairo quarters said they "believed" that Sollum is in enemy hands. The town, 10 miles east of the Libyan-Egyptian border, apparently was captured by heavily reinforced Axis troops after bitter skirmishing that continued more than a week.

The first major Axis objective in Egypt in all likelihood is Mersa Matruh, an important port where begins the coastal railroad leading eastward to the great British naval base of Alexandria and the Suez canal. Mersa Matruh is 130 miles east of Sollum.

LOS ANGELES AIR SHOW OFFERS THRILLS

Special to Boston Evening American

LOS ANGELES, April 29—Lifting the cloak of secrecy surrounding latest developments in high speed racing planes, mass parachute jumps, dive bombing and air dog battle tactics, the Los Angeles Examiner will present the world's greatest air show opening at Santa Anita race track May 30 to June 1 under auspices of Pacific Coast Air Races, Inc.

Through the co-operation of Army and Navy as well as aeronautic officials of the national defense program, planes never before publicly flown, will be in action.

The gigantic show colors its exhibitions with action—sham battles, air races, smoke fight tracings, modern city bombings—all exacting reproductions of scores of thrilling sky stories now filling the news columns.

Among many of the spine chilling moments now being prepared by experienced aviation officials are the dead stick acrobatics by Bill Morrison; the weird "Man from Mars" like effect of the internationally famous bat wing flight from 10,000 feet, and a high speed dog fight in the latest planes by Tex Rankin and Frank Clark.

For the first time on any air show field a trained corps of women fliers will participate in a mass parachute jump.

A closeup of a dive bomber in action and the effects of bombing a modern city will be highly dramatized during the program, with Paul Mantz's scheduled 15,000-foot terminal dive in one of the latest Army planes and the bombing of a miniature London, built especially in the middle of the race track infield.

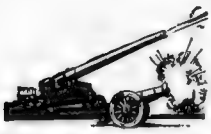
Dictionaries, here's a new word—
HYDRO-FORMING!

Americans, here's an entirely new way of making gasoline—destined to give a new definition to power!



In the modern gun, with today's propellent powders, greater power is achieved because the flame is controlled—pressure is built-up behind the shell. The old cannon wasted power in violent, uncontrolled explosion.

The word is so new it isn't in the dictionary yet—but you'll hear it a lot from now on. From a revolutionary new refining process—Hydro-forming—comes a new gas that steps up all old ideas of what gas can do—of how much work per drop it can turn out!

For Hydro-formed American Gas solves the problem in an entirely new manner, releasing more power because it burns in a different way.

Now Comes Flame Control—Combustion Control!

Burning gasoline vapor is the source of engine power. How it burns tells how much will be used, and how much wasted.

Old-fashioned gasolines burn with an explosive, violent shock, and much of the power is lost in wasteful detonation. But if that flame—combustion—can be controlled, we achieve power with less violent shock—usable driving power, not wasted power.

This is exactly what FLAME CONTROL accomplishes—now attained in Hydro-formed American Gas! Combustion IS controlled. We have power—sustained, increasing, e-x-p-a-n-d-i-n-g pressure on the pistons—dynamic thrust that reaches for more of the potential energy in every atom of gasoline. But shock is greatly reduced.

Flame Control Means Cushioned Power!

As violent, detonating shock is cut down, Cushioned Power replaces it. We retain all the energy of the combustion, yet we have a soft, sustained, cushioned surge of power. Motors are s-m-o-o-t-h, obedient, yet thoroughly alive with action. Destructive blows on bearings and other delicate motor parts are hushed, and in their place comes a satin-soft f-l-o-w of power.

Increased Volatility Makes Better Road Octane!

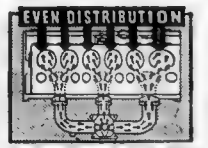
Hydro-formed American Gas is more volatile, more aromatic, more easily vaporized. Its anti-knock constituents do not remain in a liquid state as in the average conventional gasolines, but become vaporized—distributed more evenly and impartially to all cylinders alike.

Official results of road tests by Industry Committees show that conventional gasolines, on the average, lose octanes on the road. Hydro-formed American Gas actually gains them—surpassing laboratory figures. And it's road octane that counts, not laboratory ratings!

Hydro-formed AMERICAN GAS Still At Regular Gas Price!

You don't have to be a chemist to realize the tremendous importance of this discovery, pioneered by the American Oil Company. Yet in spite of all these amazing improvements—in spite of the new power now available, this latest discovery of gasoline chemistry still sells at regular gas price!

Here's the frequent result of poor gasoline distribution—some cylinders get too much—some too little. Result—poor performance.



Hydro-formed American Gas is distributed more evenly and impartially to all cylinders alike. Result—less waste, more usable power.

Famous AMOCO-GAS Now Hydro-formed, Too!

The new Hydro-forming process has also been applied to Amoco-Gas, the original special motor fuel, which likewise moves forward and upward to an all-time high in quality and efficiency.

A new and greater source of power—a new and greater motoring pleasure—a thrilling experience—all these await you in Hydro-formed American Gas and Amoco-Gas.

Peace House working with religious and peace organizations of long standing, appeals to all young men who are opposed to war from either religious or humanitarian convictions to register "CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTOR" on their draft questionnaire. After years of armed work for peace, our Government recognizes this right. It is a matter of interest to observe that after England's many months of war, Canada did not have compulsory military service for overseas and has no Lease Lend Bill but is SELLING armaments in large quantities to her mother country. In England over 50,000 Conscientious Objectors are helping their government in peaceful employment. IT IS NOT NECESSARY TO BELONG TO A RELIGIOUS SECT OR SOCIETY TO BE A CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTOR ALTHOUGH SOME DRAFT BOARD OFFICIALS ARE STILL APPARENTLY IGNORANT OF THIS PHASE OF THE LAW. Do not allow the opportunity to escape. If you are convinced that killing your fellowmen is contrary to the law of GOD and MAN and with advice and suggestions for filling your draft questionnaire as, "Conscientious Objector," write, sending a carefully self addressed, stamped envelope.

To the Clergy: The undersigned wishes to respectfully entreat you to draw the attention of your congregations to the Ten Commandments as a model of life to be exercised in the relations between nations as well as individuals—the safeguard from civilization self destruction.

Groton Fire Fighter Killed In Crash

est wardens, on the watch for fresh outbreaks.

Within the blackened district masses of flame and smoke continued to billow skyward as the blaze burned itself out.

Summer homes of the Elisha Greenlaw estate and Dr. Kenneth W. Steere of Belmont were destroyed in the Lost Lake section of Groton, while elsewhere in North Chelmsford, Westford, Graniteville, Pepperell and Forge Village a dozen other buildings were leveled.

LUMBER FEEDS FLAMES

Huge stacks of lumber salvaged by the government after the 1938 hurricane fed the flames and continued to burn today. State Conservation Commr. Raymond J. Kenney, who personally directed the fire fighting efforts, sent wardens into the fire area to start an estimate of the widespread loss.

Other Massachusetts fires occurred at West Boylston, where the Worcester County Tuberculosis Sanitarium was threatened, Savoy, Winchendon and Chester.

More piles of government lumber, six lumber camps and several farmhouses were destroyed by New Hampshire's most severe fire, which swept 500 acres and was battled by 400 men. Men and equipment from Keene and seven adjoining towns fought the fire, concentrated in Marlow, N. H.

SMOKE SEEN 80 MILES

Dense columns of smoke swirled around Mount Monadnock, 25 miles to the south, so that the forest fire observer at the peak of the mountain was forced to report "visibility zero." The smoke mass was seen as far south as Worcester, 80 miles from the fire.

Other New Hampshire forest fires broke out in Nelson and Hinsdale. Gov. Blood of New Hampshire stated that because of the powder-dry condition of the woodlands, the forest will remain closed to the public on May 1, opening date of the brook trout fishing season.

Sixty CCC boys augmented the force of firemen who combatted a brush blaze in Otisfield, Me. Two square miles were burned before the flames were brought under control.

U. S. ADMITS PACT ON FAR EAST BASES

By KINGSBURY SMITH
International News Service
Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, April 29 — A "gentleman's understanding" exists between the United States, Great Britain, Australia and the Netherlands for the mutual use of their military and naval bases in the Pacific in the event the possessions of any one of those four powers should be attacked by Japan, it was learned today.

Informed sources said the Pacific bases of the four "white" powers would be placed at the immediate disposal of the armed forces of any one of them that was the victim of aggression.

American bases in the Pacific would be made available to the other three powers under the terms of the lease-lend aid act. British, Australian and Dutch warships and airplanes would be permitted to use the American bases for refueling and repairs. In return, American warships and warplanes would be welcomed in any of the British Australian or Dutch bases.

Questions relative to the mutual use of the Anglo-American land, sea and air bases in the Far East were discussed at a recent meeting in Manila between Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, commander-in-chief of the British forces in eastern Asia; Admiral Thomas C. Hart, commander-in-chief of the U. S. Asiatic fleet; Maj.-Gen. George Grunert, commander of the U. S. Army forces in the Philippines, and Maj.-Gen. Douglas MacArthur, American military adviser to the Philippine Commonwealth.

Jesse Jones Sees Debt of 90 Billion

WASHINGTON, April 29 (AP)—Jesse Jones forecast today that the national debt would mount to at least $90,000,000,000, and declared "we have not yet made any sacrifices."

"But they are in store for us, plenty of them," the Secretary of Commerce added in an address prepared for the annual convention of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

"A few months ago we were worrying about whether we could afford to increase government borrowing authority above $45,000,000,000," Jones recalled. "It seems probable now that it will grow to at least double that amount, even allowing for paying as much of this extraordinary cost as our economy can stand from current taxes.

"Frankly, it has never occurred to me that we could not carry a national debt equal to a year's income, and as we build the national income we can carry more debt.

"But whatever amount we have to borrow, we must commence to pay back the day the emergency is over."

The cabinet official declared that "much more" money will be appropriated for national defense within the next four years, and pointed out that the cost of maintaining the Army and Navy will mount as the organizations are expanded.

At another point in his address the Texan cited an estimate that "one-fourth of the normal manpower working hours will be required to produce and manufacture things necessary to the defense program.

"That means," he said, "that one hour out of every four must be taken from the production and manufacture of things we use in our normal every-day life. That means that we will either have to get along with fewer of the things to which we are accustomed and which we take for granted, or we must superimpose on our normal economy a 25 per cent increase in our productive capacity—25 per cent more work hours.

SOLONS HIT RETAIL SALES TAX PLAN

WASHINGTON, April 29 (AP)—Two members of the House Ways and Means Committee today condemned the principle of a retail sales tax as a means of raising part of the $3,600,000,000 in new revenue sought for defense.

The sales tax suggestion was put forward on behalf of the New York State Chamber of Commerce yesterday by William J. Schieffelin, Jr., chairman of the chamber's committee on taxation. He told the House group that the state chamber was not "urging" such a levy but thought it should be considered.

Reps. Robertson, (D.) of Virginia, and Disney, (D.) of Oklahoma, had only criticism for that method of federal taxation, and Robertson predicted that the committee would follow, in general, the treasury's recommendations calling for sharply higher income tax.

This forecast aroused considerable attention, for previously several committee members had indicated a preference for the more moderate income tax increases contained in the revenue plan prepared by the staff of the joint congressional committee on taxation.

Robertson, discussing suggestions for a retail sales tax, told newsmen he believed that "a reasonable income tax" would be much fairer because it was based on ability-to-pay, whereas, in his opinion, the consumer tax was not.

Disney, who favors broadening the field of consumer taxes through manufacturers' excise levies, said a federal retail sales tax would be "nonsense" because of the collection problem involved.

The manufacturers' levies are collected directly from the manufacturers, while the retail sales tax would be paid when consumers bought the goods.

U. S. Chamber To O. K. Tax Bill

WASHINGTON, April 29 (AP)—The United States Chamber of Commerce was expected today to endorse an emergency federal fiscal policy of greatly increased taxes, drastic economies in non-defense expenditures, and sale of government bonds direct to the public, where possible, instead of to banks.

Although informed officials forecast that the statement of the chamber's attitude on taxation would be phrased in general terms, they indicated that it would give substantial, though indirect support to the Treasury's plan to raise at least $3,600,000,000 in new revenues by boosting income and excise rates and adding a variety of new levies.

Indications were that resolutions will be voted Friday on federal fiscal policy would emphasize the dangers of inflation inherent in a national debt of the proportions now being reached and would urge bond sales to the public rather than to banks as a way to avoid piling up inflationary bank reserves.

SUNER SEEN NEXT SPANISH RULER WHEN NAZIS STRIKE

By THOMAS C. WATSON

International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, April 29—Possibility that Gen. Francisco Franco would be removed as Spanish dictator and replaced by Foreign Minister Ramon Serrano Suner when and if Adolf Hitler launches an attack on Gibraltar across Spanish territory was foreseen in informed London circles today.

These quarters expressed belief that as soon as Germany's panzer divisions cross the Pyrenees from France into Spain—if they do so—Franco will resign and go to Lisbon and eventually to London where he may form a "free Spanish" movement backed by Spanish traditionalists and conservative generals.

Portuguese Premier Gen. Antonio Oliveira Salazar may also quit his post and country and come to England, should the Nazis invade Portugal, London diplomatic sources said.

BEAR DOWN ON SUEZ

With his campaign in the Balkans completed, Hitler is expected by neutral military observers in London to bear down on the Suez canal through Turkey as his next step and simultaneously try to close the western entrance to the Mediterranean.

The latter would involve two alternative courses. First, it was said, Hitler may attempt a direct attack across Spain on Portugal, or secondly, he may seize Spanish Morocco and thus cut off all traffic through the Straits of Gibraltar, rendering Britain's "Rock" militarily almost useless.

If Hitler succeeds in shutting both Suez and the straits of Gibraltar, it was believed he would turn clouds of his Stukas loose in a systematic offensive against the British Mediterranean fleet in an attempt to realize one of his greatest dreams, a naval victory over Britain.

Sons of Belgian Premier Die In Train Fire

LONDON, April 29 (AP)—Jean and Louis Pierlot, sons of Belgian Premier Hubert Pierlot, were listed today among five definitely identified fatalities resulting from a fire which yesterday destroyed several coaches of the London-Newcastle express.

A third son of the Belgian premier, 13-year-old Gerard, was taken to a hospital.

The boys, with approximately 100 others, were returning to Ampleforth College, Catholic public school, following the Easter recess, when the train caught fire.

First reports said that six were killed, but the total death toll still was not definitely known today. Cause of the fire was under investigation.

Pierlot was joined here by his wife and seven children last January.

Lionel Atwill's Son, RAF Flier, Killed

Orson Welles Group Out to Free Bridges

NEW YORK, April 29 (AP)—Formation of a "citizens' committee for Harry Bridges," with Orson Welles, actor-producer, as a co-founder, was announced by the committee's headquarters.

Its stated purpose is to "inform" public opinion as to the realities behind the current deportation trial of Bridges, West Coast labor leader. Listed sponsors of the committee include educators, writers, public officials and others distinguished in arts and sciences.

Welles and his co-committeemen, John Hezaiy Hammond, Jr., New York music patron, and Prof. F. O. Matthiessen, Harvard University, contended, according to the committee's announcement, that Bridges was being tried for the second time on "essentially the same charge," a trial they said they considered an attack on all organized labor, on the rights of minorities and a focal point of the entire current attack on civil liberties."

In Hollywood, Welles asserted he had joined the committee because he believed Bridges "has earned the right to live in the United States as a citizen after successfully defending that right" at a previous hearing before Dean James M. Landis of the Harvard Law School.

Welles declared that the Landis hearing determined that Bridges was not a dangerous alien.

Among the committee sponsors listed were Charleton Beals, writer; Elmer A. Benson, former Minnesota governor; Dr. Charles Sumner Bacon, professor emeritus of the University of Illinois Medical School; Lillian Hellman, playwright; Mrs. Thomas N. Hepburn, Hartford, Ct., clubwoman and mother of Actress Katharine Hepburn; Dr. Max Lerner, Williams College professor and Clifford Odets, playwright.

9000 Officers Hear Hitler

BERLIN, April 29 (AP)—Adolf Hitler declared today in a Sportspalast speech to 9000 young army, navy and air force and SS (Elite Guard) officers that "wherever an embattled German officer stands he can be sure there constantly will be German musketeers at his side."

Hitler stressed to the members of his audience, all of whom are due for promotion, their place in Nazi defense forces.

No further excerpts from Hitler's speech were available.

BOSTON After DARK

By GEORGE HOLLAND

JUST HER BUBBLES AND her alabaster self will be Sally Rand's offering to the altar of art in her forthcoming appearance at the Latin Quarter . . . No such extra-curricular bits as goading Police Commissioner Timility or the Watch and Ward Society whatever has become of the Watch and Ward Society? —into action are planned . . . Not at this time . . . Sally will go it straight, suppressing her flare for snaring headlines.

THE SPOTLIGHT MAN, FOR INSTANCE, WILL spotlight the lovely Rand under the rays of the quieting "blue," and there will be no repetition of a quite famous incident in which the electrician threw on the glaring white lights at the climax of Sally's dance . . . This episode, coincidentally enough, occurred just as a prankish ringsider ignited one of Sally's most strategic bubbles with the lighted end of a cheroot . . . None of that this time—according to present plans.

SALLY'S OFFSTAGE SELF is thoroughly maidenish and shrouded in dignity . . . You may remember that when she was at the height of her box office popularity (as a fan-dancer just turning to bubbles) Sally recruited a company of legitimate actors to support her in a series of one-night stands, in which Miss Rand played the Sadie Thompson role in "Rain". . . She was netting huge sums, varying from $4000 to $6000 a week, when the urge struck her to dabble with the sock and buskin.

AT THAT RATE OF EARNING —it was a definite sacrifice for Sally to set apart one night of seven to troupe in "Rain," with a payroll of 11 characters and the keep of three monkeys . . . But she persisted with her idea, and charged it off to experience (and perhaps publicity) . . . The truth is that the young woman who transformed a falling Chicago World Exposition into a hit, has a talent for exploitation which is sure, practical and inspired.

SHE HAD BAD LUCK at San Francisco, but it was lack of a novel show rather than lack of publicity which sent her to the financial baths . . . For once her instinct for perfect showmanship failed her . . . She would probably admit, now that the unpleasantness is finished, that it was a mistake to install a "dude ranch" in California, where ranches are no novelty and some of them are as large as Bulgaria.

SALLY ISN'T MAKING further mistakes of the same kind; that is she is not carrying a heavy overhead along her route these days . . . At the Latin Quarter, in Miami Beach, plain, unadorned Sally Rand was game enough to lure the spenders . . . She exposed her undoubted talents to the admiring gaze of the Florida tourists (and the "Crackers," as well) and neither the cops nor other headline-making accessories were necessary to make business good.

AND SO IT WILL BE in Boston, where more than an academic interest is being shown of late in the lively arts . . . (As J. P. Marquand, should he ever write a tome entitled "My Experiences with Dame Boston; Her City Council and Other Defenders of Boston Womanhood," will testify) . . . Sally will dance, and let it go at that . . . Or so run the plans for her limited engagement beginning Sunday next as planned at this writing.

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY: Mention of the City Council recalls a "parlay" favored by Councilor Michael J. Ward, favored with the Brighton city father's customary expansiveness to the end that all—friends and foes—will benefit . . . Michael favors "Little Beans," in the Kentucky Derby and urges the proceeds of a mild wager on the Palladino colt—if successful—be placed on the St. Louis Cardinals and the Boston Red Sox.

MIKE IS STILL chuckling over a scrap of conversation he heard at Gansett when he and Mrs. Ward were seated next to a pair of race-track novices who were trying to call a close finish . . . One of the two was sure a horse he had bet on was victorious . . . "Yeah, he wins it good," said the bettor . . . "He musta win it by half a hoise." . . . (Half a length, of course, is the preferred usage.)

AND THIS COLUMN finds some amusement in the affectation being currently indulged in by local characters who didn't know a sarcingle from a bottle until raring hit New England . . . "Are you going to the 'course' today?" they will ask you . . . With the masses, I'm afraid, the race track will remain the "track" instead of the "course" . . . Hereabouts, at any rate.

STIRLING HAYDEN has a press agent, and we are entitled to be skeptical that the verities are being maintained constantly when Stirling's name recurs as the hero of much trivia . . . (Such as his alleged show-up of an Errol Flynn adventure story by assertedly saying he saw the yacht Flynn was supposed to have shipwrecked afloat in South America) . . . But the flash that he and Cobina Wright, Jr., are making the night spots of Hollywood together is on the level.

THAT IT'S A romantic attachment, however, may be doubted . . . Stirling has a "one and only" and she doesn't hail from Honolulu, as one bit of gossip reported . . . (She lives in Wellesley) . . . But young Cobina, who is somewhat sensitive about her height, confided when she was in Boston that her ideal man must be tall, more than six feet high—and I think she said "MUCH" more.

Power behind the throne?

HOW do you do, Mr. King of America! How do you keep yourself in power? What prevents some dictator from dethroning you, making you HIS subject?

How do you manage to know always what is going on, on all sides of you? How do you manage to go about your PRIVATE affairs without interference, yet control your public servants, run a vast democracy, banishing crooks and rewarding honest men?

* * *

WELL, LET'S SEE. The Founding Fathers wisely put freedom of speech and thought beyond the throttling hand of any would-be dictator. Therefore you are able to defend yourself with the weapons of truth and fact.

You have given to newspapers the job of unearthing the facts. Your papers, you say, must see to it that you know what is happening—good or bad.

Is the governor of your state doing his job well? Are the teachers in your schools performing their rightful duties? Is the health officer seeing to it that restaurants and food stores are clean? What do the markets have in the way of bargains today?

Easy questions for you to answer— because you have only to turn to your newspapers for all the facts and opinions and offerings of the day.

And so, behind that high and secure throne from which you, the people, rule, you keep a vast power. It is sometimes miscalled the "Power of the Press."

* * *

NONSENSE! The press has no power except the power of truth and knowledge—power which it can give to you to use. If it were true that a newspaper—just any newspaper—had great "power," some sniveling communist or fascist sheet could take your democracy away from you! The American public has power over the newspapers. A power exercised daily simply by buying or not buying them.

It is truth, news, information, fact, that makes you a king. And so long as freedom of expression is the rule in America, your rule is secure.

Over 300 leading newspaper publishers join together to bring you this weekly message about the function of the press in a free nation. Newspaper Publishers Committee, 420 Lexington Ave., New York.

Our Austen Lake in England

By AUSTEN LAKE
STAFF REPORTER, BOSTON AMERICAN
(Copyright, 1941)

LONDON, April—The Cafe de Paris is, or rather was, one of the flash spots of Leicester Square—an ornate dine-and-dance rendezvous where London's middle smart-set dallied in an atmosphere of crystal gilt and polychrome. There were stiff bosomed waiters, a Negro swing band, and a postage stamp dance floor. A Nazi 500-pound bomb fell on it at 9 o'clock one night and killed or maimed 90-odd persons.

I had dinner there and left at 8:30!

Oppressed by the inky-dark streets and the impersonal smudges that jostled by, I went to the Cafe de Paris for a few moments escape—for light, movement and forgetfulness.

One fumbles for the door, ducks around a heavy curtain and stands blinking in a guady foyer where uniformed officers, women in evening dress and the curious flotsam of London night life gather for a thimble and a crust. It was, in that constrained London manner, gay—not boisterous with alcoholic hoopla, but decorously, languidly gay.

A balcony ran around the rotunda—the usual supper club setup with rose shaded table lamps, murated walls, white nappery and elbow-leaning couples. Twin stairways lead downstairs like encircling arms, enfolding an Afro-American band, whose leader, an ebony, tail-and-tied, pomaded acrobat, shook out the rhythm with his shoulders and grinned mawkishly at the patrons.

The headwaiter, after round-the-world fashion, greeted customers unctuously with his menu and led them, cat-footed, to a table. A waiter set down a tiny, paper thin curl of butter and a pair of hard coated buns and stood attentively.

THE GIRL IN ORANGE

The floor was moderately crowded when I went in. A pretty blonde girl in a startling, low-cut gown of Persian Orange was dancing with a Naval Lieutenant, her head angled coyly with an upward sweep of eyes under lashes. The young officer chattered confidentially, clearly exhilarated. Life was congenial. The war seemed very far away.

An air raid alarm had sounded hours before, but the diners, after months of weary experience, gave it no thought. To them it was only another nightly nuisance.

There was a gaunt, tired looking colonel of infantry, with his middle-aged wife and daughter, who bickered mildly over the wine list. A trio of airforce officers drank double whiskies. A large bosomed dowager and her meek-looking male escort brooded moodily at the orchestra. Uniformed girls sat with uniformed men. Waiters bustled to and fro with trays. In the far corner the girl in the Persian Orange gown sat with her Naval officer under a crude painting of a French flower girl, while a wine steward pressed the cork from a bottle and poured clear red vintage into tall-stemmed glasses.

That was the scene as I remembered it when I paid the chit and left, bumping blindly into an entering couple. Sorry! Pardon! O quite!

The Nazi bomb fell on the Cafe de Paris scarcely thirty minutes later and I was back within an hour, presenting my Ministry Press card to the helmetted wardens at the door and went inside where a portable lighting plant had been installed.

HIDEOUS SIGHT

It was hideous in the bright circle of that single eye—a jumble of unrelated fragments which rescue squads stirred anxiously with gloved hands, unearthing limp, often unrecognizable objects which they trundled out, hammock fashion to the waiting lorries at the curb.

The central ceiling with its original, or rococo, filigree, hung down like a horseshoe, showing the bare, bonelike lathes. The balcony on one side was a bridgeless gap with a black hole gouged in the brick masonry. The orchestra pit was a shambles with the grand piano lurched on one leg and its wire entrails spewing forth. The Negro leader was slumped over his podium, his pomaded head under the curl of one arm like a sleeping child. The waiter lay crumpled at the foot of the staircase with his menu still clutched in his hand.

And then, with a sudden sickening shock I noticed it—a shredded rag of Persian Orange cloth, draped over a twisted wall chandelier—just a shredded rag. Unmistakable! The girl with the low-cut gown, the coy head tilt and the upturned lashes.

It is not nice to tell, even to one who has seen much of the grisly business of war. But there she lay, little more than a shapeless bundle, the gay, lilting spark gone from something beautifully God-made, and now a grotesque ugly mass of man-made rubbish.

STUMBLES OVER RUINS

I turned away, nauseated by the heavy odor of burned gunpowder and something that was peculiarly like the stench of horses hooves being fitted with white hot steel shoes in a farrier's shop. I had smelt that odor once before in a death house where two felons had been executed.

Revolted, I stumbled over the welter of broken chairs, splinters of the bar, glass and pieces of balustrade and went out into the cool black of the night where a curious crowd strained at police ropes and a gruesome line of ambulances and trucks waited for their burdens.

Overhead there were still pinpoints of exploding anti-aircraft shells and the dull, menaceful drone of Nazi bombers. And suddenly I realized that, before this moment I had not known the awful significance of London's bomb wreckage—the rows of ruins, the window-boarded shells, the chimney stumps and reeling walls. They had somehow seemed like scenic, impersonal bits seen in a moving picture—unreal, fantastic, and cold as ashes.

But this I had seen and been of it. The full meaning of the chill ferocity of a war on civilians swept over me. The unerasable vision of that girl in the Orange dress. Ugh!

Follow Austen Lake's stirring account of life in England in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

Nazi Ship Starts Blockade Dash

23 Found Guilty Of Detroit Graft

DETROIT, April 29 (AP)—Former Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea, former Sheriff Thomas C. Wilcox and 21 co-defendants in the Wayne County (Detroit) graft conspiracy trial were convicted by a jury of seven women and five men after eight hours and 15 minutes of deliberation.

The jury acquitted Charles Moceri, a lesser known defendant in the case which involved charges of conspiring to protect gambling and vice operations in Wayne county.

The case was the first of four involving Detroit and Wayne county officials and law violators indicted by Circuit Judge Homer Ferguson who sat as a one-man grand jury to investigate charges that graft had been paid for official protection of illegal activities.

Portugal Clings To British Side

LISBON, Portugal, April 29 (AP)—Premier Antonio De Oliveira Salazar broke a long silence on Portugal's foreign relations by declaring at his birthday celebration that "national dignity, liberty, independence and territorial integrity" are values to which "everything else ought to be sacrificed."

The premier's declaration was voiced quietly in apparent answer to recurrent rumors of an impending thrust by Adolf Hitler toward Gibraltar, the British fortress, and that Spain and her neighbor, Portugal, are in danger of becoming involved. Portugal is a long-time ally of Britain.

Eastern Steamship Purser to Take Bride

A marriage of interest along Boston's waterfront is scheduled in New York today, when Miss Laura Bordeleaux, of Nashua, N. H. and Back Bay, becomes the bride of Arthur Roome, purser of the Eastern Steamship Lines for more than 20 years.

The ceremony will be performed in Collegiate Church, 5th ave. and 26th st.

Roome has been a familiar figure on the Eastern Steamship liners Evangeline and Boston. He is also known to thousands of winter vacationists to Nassau and Bermuda.

TIP ON CAPE BRUSH FIRE WINS CASH AWARD FOR TWO

Two almost simultaneous tips on last week's devastating brush fire which left hundreds homeless in Fieldston, Ocean Bluffs and Brant Rock win a total of $8 for two women, one from Brockton, the other from Brant Rock.

Of the awards $5 goes to the Brant Rock woman who gave the first inkling that six cottages were burning at one section while the remaining $3 goes to the Brockton woman for her tip that the fire was sweeping down the marsh to other sections and help was being called from nearby communities.

ALERT TIPSTERS

Another $3 prize goes to a Concord man for his tip on an explosion in a gun-cotton building in the huge American Powder Mills in Concord threatening that important defense plant. As a result of the explosion which rocked neighboring communities, G-men were called in to investigate.

Four alert tipsters win awards of $2 each for their timely reporting of news events. They are:

A Newton Centre man for telephoning in details of a boating tragedy in a Middleboro pond which cost the life of one youngster and nearly proved fatal to another. A Wollaston man for reporting a similar accident in Wollaston Bay. A Belmont woman for a tip on a fire in a Belmont home which cost the lives of two children. A Chelsea woman for information on a two-car auto crash on the Lynn-Boston highway which killed two and injured five others.

FIRE AWARD

Awards of $1 each go to a Wellesley woman for her tip on a general alarm fire in Newton Lower Falls; a Woburn man for details on a North Woburn forest fire which burned five farms and caused scorer to flee from the path of the flames; a Brighton man for a tip that one man was killed and another injured when they were struck by a train in the Back Bay.

Additional awards of $1 each go to a Cambridge man for information on a stolen car chase in which the driver was shot by police; a Saugus man for the tip that a Saugus girl was struck and killed and four others injured when a taxicab raced out of control in that town and a Lynn tipster for information on a woman plunging 30 feet to her death in Lynn.

G. E. Employes Get Pay Raise

General Electric Co. employes, a total of 21,500 of them in Massachusetts, today enjoyed a wage increase of 10 cents an hour following agreements signed by the company with the CIO.

The raise affects 14,000 workers at the two Lynn plants and 7600 workers at the Pittsfield plant. Other plants affected are at: Bridgeport, Ct.; Schenectady, N. Y.; Erie, Pa.; Philadelphia and Ft. Wayne, Ind. It will be submitted to local unions for ratification.

It also provides for double time, instead of time and a half for working on "observed" holidays and Sundays, and an additional five per cent bonus to second shift workers to equalize their pay with third shift workers who have been receiving a 10 per cent bonus figured on the day shift scale.

U. S. Newsman Taken Prisoner by Italy

ROME, April 29 (AP)—The newspaper Il Messaggero said today its correspondent in Belgrade had been informed that Sir Ronald Ian Campbell, British ambassador to Yugoslavia; Col. C. S. Clark, British military attache, and Ray Brock, war correspondent of the New York Times, had been taken aboard an Italian torpedo boat when they attempted to leave the Dalmatian coast on a steamer bound for Crete.

The dispatch did not say where the men were now.

Boy, 3, Swallows Jack-Stone, Recovers

Leonard O'Neil, 3, of New st., East Boston, went home from City Hospital today—another illustration of the wonders of modern medical science.

A dozen hours earlier, the youngster had been brought in with his favorite jack-stone tightly wedged in his throat. Skilled doctors removed the jack in a hurry by means of a laryngoscope.

IRISH NAMES have never been accorded their proper place in the public school textbooks, says John P. McGrail of the State Department of Education.

Some historians ignore the Irish entirely.

Others make scant mention of them.

This, concludes Mr. McGrail, can hardly be accidental and it certainly seems unfair.

Of course, no really accurate history of the United States would try to omit the Irish, for their contributions to American progress have been too notable to be hidden by prejudice.

Seven signers of our American Constitution were Irishmen.

Five of these men were natives of Ireland and the other two were born in America of Irish parentage.

Eight Irishmen signed the Declaration of Independence.

John Barry, a courageous son of Ireland, was the first commissioned officer of the United States Navy to capture a British ship of war.

Another brave Irishman took two million dollars' worth of sea prizes from George the Third's fleet to assist this country in gaining its freedom.

At least one-half of the men who fought under General George Washington had Irish blood in their veins.

We often wonder how those writers who produce biased history books, in which the Irish are conspicuous only by their absence, would manage to explain the presence in New England of such pioneer towns as Dublin, Belfast and Londonderry.

THE TAX BURDEN on Boston residential property disturbs business men, none more than Carleton Hunneman, president of the Real Estate Exchange.

"It is inconceivable," says Mr. Hunneman, "that a city can long maintain its integrity under conditions which compel the owner of a $7000 dwelling to pay taxes on an assessed valuation of $20,000 to $30,000. Yet that is what is happening all over Boston."

There is an abundance of evidence to support Mr. Hunneman's complaint.

A few weeks ago a beautiful Back Bay mansion was sold for $10,000.

But the new owner is faced with the grim prospect of having to pay taxes on an assessment of $40,000!

Another mansion on one of our best streets was purchased last month for $12,000.

Yet, on the municipal books, this building is listed as being worth $55,000.

Such a situation is clearly ridiculous—not to say, ruinous.

Taxes should be levied on the amount of money a house is worth today—not on what it was worth thirty years ago or on what municipal authorities think it ought to be worth.

Everyone knows the city has to have tax revenue in order to exist.

But the imposition of unfair and unjust taxes is not the way to get the revenue.

Perhaps if we paid a little more attention to modernizing our highways, improving our ancient port facilities and doing other necessary things, our officials would not have to tax real estate to the point of confiscation.

SCIENCE SUCCEEDS in maintaining a certain aloofness from the current European war.

Associate Professor Bart J. Bok of the Harvard Observatory reveals that despite the fact that their countries are fighting each other, English and German astronomers are still exchanging astronomical research papers.

The star-gazer in Berlin knows what his brother star-gazer in London is discovering, and vice versa.

This is very interesting.

There must be a certain satisfaction in being able to look out beyond falling shells and bursting shrapnel to Mars, Venus, Saturn and other celestial planets.

Just the same, we cannot help thinking that the distinguished men of science would be more profitably engaged if they were exchanging ways and means to end the horrible slaughter and to spare the lives of countless thousands of men, women and children who had no part in the declaration of this war and whose only prayer is for peace.

WE ARE PLEASED to say a good word for the current membership campaign of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

Generally looked upon as one of the most efficient commercial bodies in the whole United States and rightly respected throughout Massachusetts and New England, the Chamber has become so necessary a part of the Boston business picture that it is hard to imagine the city carrying on without its help.

The Chamber has enjoyed this success because it has always been representative of business and industry.

An enlarged membership will make it more so.

The Talk of Boston by Pauline Warren

WELL-KNOWN men have a lot to contend with through the misuse of their names. Were a Senator's wife to be thrown out of the Senate gallery, it would not be any more ludicrous than the following incident which took place in Boston.

If you know any member of the Bruin hockey team, you probably realize how superstitious they can be during a winning streak. Prior to the last play-offs for the Stanley Cup they were undefeated for 23 games. It is whispered that some of the players even refused to change their underwear during that whole time, fearful of changing their luck.

NANCY ADAMS, young wife of Weston Adams, the Bruins' owner, did not escape this nightmarish propitiation of Lady Luck.

At the first game she wore a little print dress she had never liked. It was winter, so she thought it would do under a mink coat, topped with a little fur hat.

Then the Bruins began to win and Weston looked at her in sheer horror when she decided to wear another outfit at the next game. It might change the luck!

NANCY, who is one of Boston's prettiest women, naturally is typically feminine. She adores pretty clothes and has a wardrobe full of them.

As the season wore on and the Bruins kept winning or tying games, every other hockey fan appeared at the Garden in bright spring hats and gay clothes, but not Nancy!

She sweltered in her mink coat and fur hat and developed sheer nausea for that hostile print dress, while people in nearby boxes began to look at her a little askance.

HER WORST experience, however, came the night of the final game when the Bruins finally clinched the series and captured the famous cup for Boston.

Weston, of course, as excited as a two-year-old, flew to the dressing room where the players were letting off steam; slapping each other on the back; yelling their heads off and going absolutely crazy; as only a keyed-up team like that can, when it finally breaks the unbearable suspense under which it has been laboring.

Nancy waited patiently in the lobby for her husband, knowing full well it would be quite a while before the men had quieted down, had their showers and released Weston from all the well-wishing. So she settled down to a good long wait, like a dutiful wife.

AFTER a while the officers policing the Garden started closing up. One of them spied Nancy, standing innocuously by one of the pillars, and bawled:

"Come on, sister, out of here. We're locking up."

"I have to wait for my husband," said Nancy reasonably.

"So it's a husband you're waiting for, eh girlie? Well—you'll have to wait somewhere else. You can't do it here."

"But, officer, he's in there with the players and, if I don't wait for him here, he won't know where to find me."

"Who's your husband?" asked the officer.

"Weston Adams," replied Nancy, thinking this might at least earn her the right to wait. After all hadn't the Bruins just won an important series? And shouldn't the name of their proud owner mean something on this night of all nights?

"So! It's Weston Adams is it who's your husband!" echoed the unbelieving cop. "You don't say! Come on—out of here—quick. You girls think of the funniest alibis."

And with that, little Nancy had to get out, none too gently urged by the officer.

PRETTY NANCY ADAMS WITH ADORING HUSBAND

THE CONSUL of Honduras and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Augusto Rodriguez-Ulloa, reside in an apartment house on Marlborough st., not far from Dartmouth.

Like diplomatic representatives the world over, their conduct is dignified and irreproachable.

Noted visitors stream in and out, which sometimes awes the other residents in the building.

Young and charming, the couple have many friends and entertain quietly.

But one evening not so long ago, the tenant below them was astonished to hear the most outlandish sounds emanating from their apartment.

Whams, bangs and thumps sounded exactly as if wholesale murder was being committed, with the bodies being hurtled out of the windows.

ALARMED, the tenant ran up!

He rang and rang but the noise only grew louder and louder. Finally he banged on the door and all the noise ceased.

The Consul himself came to the door, looking a little flushed and awry, but with no bruises or black eye.

"I came up," said the tenant, "thinking you might be in trouble and I could help."

"Trouble?" puzzled Mr. Rodriguez-Ulloa, then his face lighting up:

"Oh, you heard the noise? So very sorry—you see my wife and I are jitterbugs and we were practicing."

Sure enough, it's true.

This form of native dancing has captured the imagination of the distinguished Consul and he practices diligently.

But when we last checked, Mrs. Rodriguez-Ulloa was losing some of her enthusiasm.

NEW JOB EXPECTED FOR JUSTICE

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK, April 29—In Washington, it was indicated that Fiorello LaGuardia will reconsider his declining the Home Defense post. And his acceptance will not necessarily mean that he'd resign as mayor of the City of New York . . . Mr. Justice William O. Douglas, whose departure from the bench is expected to take place in June, will not move into an emergency job—but into one which has more permanence . . . The next issue of Partisan Review will report, in an uncensored dispatch from Paris, that a high Nazi official in Paris offered Picasso the princely gift of three tons of coal, because the German officers are collecting Picasso's paintings. The artist refused to make the deal, and assured: "I can freeze as well as anybody."

WHAT is the greatest number of love letters you ever wrote in a day? Or are you just a one-a-day love letter writer? All those who are 100 per cent in love, before and after marriage, should, when separated, write at least three letters a day, send two telegrams and make one long distance telephone call . . . "I Am an American Day" is May 18. In Manhattan the chief celebration will be in Central Park. Was in Central Park I had my first baby carriage ride, ate my first lolly-pop, saw my first hippopotamus and fell into my first pond in my first pair of pants. And it was probably in Central Park for the first of many times, my mother, a 1000 per cent American, said to me: "You were born an American. And remember actions speak louder than words." There will be many patriotic songs played and sung on "I Am an American Day," but I think the following should lead the list:

My country 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty.
Of thee I sing:
Land where my fathers died,
Land of the Pilgrims' pride
From every mountain side
Let freedom ring

ASIDES: A dance for the benefit of the local draftees. To get money to send the boys at camp "Bigger and Better Surprise Packages." That's what Teresa Gallegher and the girls of Cedarhurst, L. I., have planned. A great idea. How about one in your town? . . . Gary Cooper is a tooth pick user. Dentists say the use of tooth picks is good for the health of teeth. Very few restaurants offer their patrons tooth picks any more. Shamed by the books of etiquette I guess . . . Now they have revived "Charley's Aunt." How about reviving May Robson's old hit, "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary"? Plenty of laughs in that one

CONFIDENTIAL: Said Ed Howe: "If you want to know how old a woman is, ask her sister-in-law." Mr. Howe also once queried: "Who ever saw a man and wife who were both red-headed?" I never have seen such a matrimonial combination. How about you? . . . Some think Mothers' Day should be called Parents' Day. I like it the way it is. Pop will get his break on Fathers' Day . . . "The United States Has Rushed Britain 3400 Planes," says a headline in the London, Eng., Daily Dispatch. And Colonel Lindbergh says: "The United States is deplorably lacking in fighting planes." And so it goes . . . Is often said the most affectionate girls in the U. S. A. are the Detroit, Mich., girls. A visiting Chicagoan is reported to have said to a Detroit girl: "I want to kiss you—and kiss you—and kiss you!" And she said: "What, only three times?"

MY DAY

By Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Monday—Yesterday we listened in a pleasant living room to Mr. Winston Churchill speak, so many thousand miles away. One must admire a man who can trust the people of his country so completely that he can tell them stark naked, cruel truths unafraid. That quality of courage is a kind of challenge which calls to the very depth of other human souls

Mr. Churchill can use the English language so that it rings and pounds the emotion behind the words into your brain. He knows the value of contrast. Though it is years since I have read the poem which he quoted, I can think of none better to fit the occasion. When all is said and done, however, what remains with me is his stark sincerity and indomitable courage.

Miss Thompson and I lunched with Mrs. Jerome Schneider and my daughter-in-law, Romelle. In the afternoon many people came to the Douglas' house for tea. The patio buzzed with conversation and for me it was most exciting. To meet and talk with people whose work one has long admired is always a thrilling experience.

IT WAS particularly nice to see again some familiar faces. Mr. Marc Connelly, who was so patient in the broadcast which I had the fun of presiding over in the last campaign; Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Mann, whose short time with us in the White House was such a pleasure; and our old friend Mr. Eddie Dowling, who is here acting in the play "Time of Your Life," which we enjoyed so much last year in New York.

After dinner, we went over to Mr. Walt Disney's studio and he was kind enough to show us some of the work he is doing for defense. I liked particularly the drawings before they reach the color stage, and was very glad to find one artist at work in the studio and to see what the process of making these drawings really means. These cute little figures may teach us many lessons in the future, as well as provide the entertainment on which we have come to count.

STURGES WILL STAR VERONICA LAKE

By Louella O. Parsons

Preston Sturges

HOLLYWOOD, April 29 — Temperamental as some people have found Preston Sturges you can not take away from him his ability to give the actors with whom he works a new lease on their careers. He started Brian Donlevy on an entirely new life as an actor. He made a glamour girl out of Barbara Stanwyck and put Henry Fonda in dress clothes. And now Veronica Lake, who Paramount is building, gets an opportunity to do something really important on the screen. She steps into the lead in "Sullivan's Travels," the next Sturges picture

Veronica, of course, is controversial. There are those who think she has a great future and others who do not. Whatever is the opinion, you must admit the girl has an interesting personality and for a young actress who has made one picture she has attracted wide attention I am putting my money on her

GENE TIERNEY'S eye trouble is much more serious than the outside world knows or realizes. Her eyes closed tight and she's unable to open them after she has been on the set for any length of time. 20th Century-Fox called all sorts of specialists who are endeavoring to find what is causing the trouble and if she is allergic to some specific thing. Gene is back in the hospital and "Belle Starr" has been postponed waiting for her to recover. Once before she suffered this same eye congestion when she was on the stage and then, as now, the physicians were baffled. The delay on "Belle Starr" has cost 20th $50,000

FRANCES GIFFORD SONJA HENIE will change her mind about retiring from the screen if her new contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer materializes. I hear that "Sun Valley" is Sonja's last picture for 20th Century and she soon will be put on a long term contract by the Louis B. Mayer company. The contract, I hear, is ready for the signing and Metro is looking for stories to fit the little fancy figure-skater. I saw Sonja at the 20th Century-Fox party with her bridegroom, Dan Topping, and she weighs about 105 and looks so attractive.

ONE OF THESE DAYS—and soon—reporters will be told that Alice Faye and Phil Harris are married. The only thing that stands in the way is Phil's decree which will not be final for several months. Alice's divorce from Tony Martin was final in March. Phil is telling anybody interested that he'll marry her the minute he can

CHATTER IN HOLLYWOOD: If Warners could sell tickets to the movie fight coming up between George Raft and Eddie Robinson on "Man Power," it would outdraw any of the old Jack Dempsey gates. For the last two weeks Hollywood has been chuckling up its sleeve over the feud between Georgie and Eddie G., who no longer speak on the set. The wisecracks between them (only they aren't kidding) have been flying like boxers' punches. Understand—no holds are barred, when the boys fight it out on the screen

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD: Yvonne Valle, once wed to Maurice Chevalier, Clippered into New York last week: Rita Kaufman Lowe, Eddie's ex, has adopted a little girl named Susan; a wedding cake, bridal decorations and favors for all 12 guests made the Zanuck dinner given for Constance Bennett and Gilbert Roland a gala affair. Connie wore the prettiest print I have seen this year. The Leroys are building a home in Bel Air and Doris is planning it herself; Lupe Velez and John Shelton a surprising new duet at Charlie Foy's; it's three nights in a row for Bob Cobb and Frances Gifford at the House of Murphy

The 20TH CENTURY-FOX party at the Biltmore was lots of fun. Sally Eilers and Harry Joe Brown entertained before the dinner with a cocktail party and among their guests was Jean Gabin who speaks English with a real American accent. Brenda Joyce in her wedding dress was with her groom Owen Ward and our other bride, Illona Massey, radiantly lovely, danced every dance with Alan Curtis.

LOUELLA PARSONS, famed internationally-circulated Hearst motion picture columnist, will be heard locally over Station WEEI every Friday between 10 and 10:30 p. m.

Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Busted my nose the other day. Got all excited waxing wails—ended up doing a Stuka dive in competition with a typewriter stand, four encyclopedias, one potted fern, a ham sandwich, 792 fan letters, an electric heater, three pups and the floor. The floor won. In nothing flat.

Thanks for the sympathy—I can always use it. But 'a'matter of fact, no great harm was done. The mason says he can fix the foundations in a week or so. And I didn't think much of the sandwich, anyway. As for the nose, it was always one of those vague features that never could quite make up its mind whether it was going to be early Greek or late Donegal. And now it's merely moreso.

ALL OF WHICH is leading up to the fact—what a lot you can learn from a simple little thing like a nose bust. Not to mention the shiner which Joe Louis himself couldn't have improved on!

There I'd gone on existing with that nose all these years . . . taking it for granted . . . letting it live its life while I lived mine . . . and never once had I checked up on its record. Now, for a few days, I did practically nothing else but. And was I chagrined!

F'instance, as noses go, it had always considered mine to be an amiable, law-abiding, bourgeois beak. It had never been haled into police courts as Exhibit A, nor had it attended "snow" parties, nor had it been involved in the other scandalous revels of underworld schnozzles. It was, I fondly believed, just a good, durable member of my facial furniture and a credit to the community.

But now, lying around, waiting for things to blow over, as it were, I was appalled to realize what a Dr. Jekyll-Mr. Hyde life that nose of mine had led.

HOW OFTEN, while appearing most respectable, it had slipped away and poked itself into divers matters that were absolutely none of its business. Thereby starting 57 varieties of Cain!

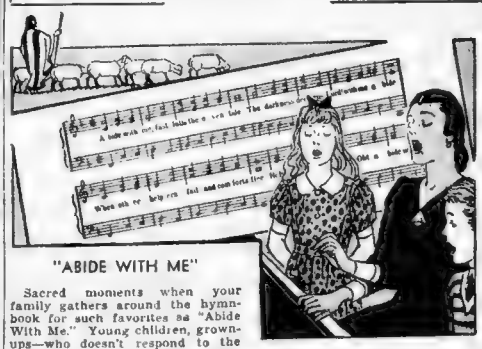
How often, with a seemingly innocent sniff, it had thrown the monkey wrench into someone's cherished plan or happy illusion. How many timid young hopes, I wondered, had been crushed by its careless snort?

Cruelest yet—how often had it callously turned aside to follow its own pleasures, regardless of the misery or obligations that lay straight ahead!

And who in the world did my nose think it was, anyway, to sit there in judgment on all the rest of humanity? Was it a Barrymore nose, one of those rare works of art which are above the law? It was not. Was it the proud prow of some great scholar or philanthropist? Not at all! It was a common, garden-variety proboscis that had gone through life getting by with murder.

No wonder it was busted. It had it coming!

Favorite Hymns in New Book



"ABIDE WITH ME"

Sacred moments when your family gathers around the hymn-book for such favorites as "Abide With Me." Young children, grown-ups—who doesn't respond to the simple sturdy faith in that hymn: "Abide with me, fast falls the eventide,
The darkness deepens, Lord! with me abide;
When other helpers fail, and comforts flee,
Help of the helpless! Oh! abide with me."

You'll find all the words and music of these and many other beloved favorites in our new hymn book, The Precious Fifty Hymns. Among the 50 are "Rock of Ages," "He Leadeth Me," "Now the Day Is Over" and many others you love to sing.

Wants Him Back After Row

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Five weeks ago I met a man with whom I fell in love. He said he loved me and we planned our marriage. He has a good job and can give me a good home and everything a girl would want. My parents, too, are willing for this marriage to take place.

Last month we had a quarrel and I didn't see him for three weeks. Because I just couldn't go on without seeing him I went to his home, which is in another town. He was home and acted as though he were glad to see me. But when we were alone he acted indifferent. Do you think he loves me any more?

That was the last time I saw him. I love him, Miss Fairfax, and I'm old enough to know my mind, and do want him back. Do you think it would be all right for me to go to his home again and tell him I love him and ask him to come to my home?

DISA. POINTED.

He may be doing what is known as "teaching you a lesson." The fact that he was glad to see you when you arrived and didn't put on his show of indefference until later gives that impression. I hope you two have made up your differences by this time. And don't quarrel again.

SUPERB CORNELIA OTIS SKINNER LEADS CAPABLE CAST TO 'THEATRE' TRIUMPH

Maugham Play In Hit Class

By PEGGY DOYLE

That alleged cynic, Britain's bountifully gifted Somerset Maugham, enjoyed a vicarious cry with handsome Cornelia Otis Skinner into her beer last night at the Plymouth but long before the 'steenth curtain-call both author and star of "Theatre" must have found themselves smiling broadly.

Which is by way of indicating that "Theatre," which opened here last night following successful Washington and Baltimore airings, looked to be a substantial hit from this aisle-seat.

The book, from which author Maugham and Guy Bolton adapted the play, was no great shakes, according to erudite book reviewers and the garden-variety of reader alike. Skipping the book, then, was our good fortune. We are informed that comparisons are all in favor of the play version of the Maugham story about the London stage's greatest actress and her discovery that her co-star of footlights and fireside is slipping from her.

Maugham, who has a rare talent for developing character and situation so that the one has roundness and richness and the other vitality and range, has, with dramatist Bolton's assistance, achieved what looks to be a sure thing for Broadway's fall schedule.

• • •

His temperamental Julia Lambert, the London stage idol, who is supposed to have been quite the ruthless baggage in the original novel, has developed a heart since reaching the proscenium. She is still not above play-acting off-stage for her own best interests and turning on the charm with push-button speed. But always she has the audience's sympathy because to a man they know that her heart belongs to Michael and that her flirtatious detouring is aimed at a second honeymoon with this husband in fame only.

Miss Skinner's endless variety as a monologist stands her in good stead in projecting the many-faceted Julia across the footlights. Her Julia is a warm, glowing creature, as tender as she's tart . . . but that's another story in this dramatization of a woman's fear that she has lost her desirability. And it is yet another proof of the incomparable skill and flexibility of this talented daughter of a talented father.

Her distinguished performance last night had us all wondering why she had so long escaped being lassoed by some smart Broadway producer for a regular multiple-charactered stage offering. As a matter of face, Miss Skinner herman. Margeston, English stage plays before she became "the greatest single attraction in the American theater," appeared a couple of years ago in the well-remembered production of "Candida."

There is nice team-work in Arthur Margetson's Michael Gosselyn, whose backstage reunion with the mercurial Julia followed a bit of "vermin in ermine" adventuring and a pre-honeymoon cruise with gilt-edged security in the person of gilt-haired Margaret Bannerman. Margetson, English stage and screen favorite, provides just the proper contrast to his mercurial mate with his casual calm, and extra-dry humor.

• • •

Another prizeworthy piece of characterization is Viola Roche's maid Evie, whose mistress is no heroine to her hand-maiden and is not spared her frequently unflattering frankness.

Frederick Bradlee, a fugitive of the Harvard Dramatic Club productions and with only one previous professional engagement behind him, enjoyed a minor triumph in the role of the 17-year-old son of the celebrated stage partnership. His Back Bay following warmly applauded him for a persuasively boyish performance.

Brief but thoroughly effective was Stanley Harrison's authentic-appearing stage doorman whose honest tribute to her greatness (alias guts) recharges the desperate actress' self-esteem.

Other supporting parts were competently handled by Joan Wetmore, Reginald Mason, Ralph Bunker and Jack Merivale.

JOAN LESLIE and Eddie Albert supply plenty of love interest in "The Wagons Roll at Night," coming Thursday to the Paramount and Fenway screens.

New Screen Find in Circus Film Due at Para-Fenway

Humphrey Bogart, as the tough owner of a carnival, and Eddie Albert, as the carnival's lion-tamer, are starred with the 16-year-old discovery, Joan Leslie, in "The Wagons Roll at Night," which comes to the Paramount and Fenway screens Thursday.

The same program will bring swing-king Tommy Dorsey in "Las Vegas Nights."

The picture, "The Wagons Roll At Night," realizes a dream of its director, Ray Enright, who became "circus crazy" as a lad in Anderson, Indiana's circus belt, where a dozen of America's best known tent shows have long made it a practice to settle down for their permanent winter quarters.

This chunky, red-haired lad who sniffed and hungered for the rollicking life of a menagerie keeper in his grammar school days is now one of Warners' ace directors.

Reluctantly he turned his back on the headquarters of Indiana circuses and his friends in them, when he reached high school age and removed with his family to Los Angeles. But the breath of the show business was in his nostrils, and "Brick" began odd jobs around Hollywood film studios as a kid.

In the days since then "Brick" Enright has directed more than 50 feature films, of which none failed to click at the box office. But the old itch for circus life persisted and he was in his element during the shootin. of "The Wagons Roll at Night," with its circus wagons, monkeys, bull whips, fortune tellers and even a calliope. Six of the loudest roaring lions from Goebbels' Lion Farm, outside of Hollywood, are part of the picture.

Supporting Dorsey and his band in "Las Vegas Nights" are Constance Moore, Bert Wheeler, Phil Regan, Betty Brewer and Red Donohue and his mule, "Uno." Ralph Murphy directed.

Vivien Leigh Trans-Lux Star

Vivien Leigh, who is currently enchanting quantities of Manhattan's movie-goers in "That Hamilton Woman," will decorate the Trans-Lux screen in the second-run "Dark Journey," starting tomorrow.

In "Dark Journey," the beautiful star of "Gone With the Wind" is cast in a role of love and espionage against a Balkan background.

Conrad Veidt, apparently a deserter from the German army, falls desperately in love with Miss Leigh's Madeleine Godard, who runs a fashionable dress shop and peddles information concerning the Allied Armies' movements to the German Secret Service heads.

Highlights in the picture are the encounter of a British "Q" ship with a German U-boat and several other stirring sea scenes.

The co-feature, "Lucky Devils" co-stars Richard Arlen and Andy Devine in a series of perilous and humorous adventures climaxed in the capture of foreign saboteurs by means of model airplanes.

Supporting players include Dorothy Lovett, Janet Shaw, Jack Arnold and Tim Ryan.

VIVIEN LEIGH plays a role of love and espionage in "Dark Journey," the new Trans-Lux feature starting tomorrow.

Sacks-Binder-Rosen Team Hit at Howard

With Comics Mike Sacks, Fred Binder and Jack Rosen as the ring-leaders, the Old Howard's current parade of fun, "Fads and Fancies," is evoking rafters-shaking laughter at every performance.

Even this celebrated stronghold of burlesque has rarely housed such hilarity before. Also featured are Lois DeFee, "queen of the Amazons," the West's red-headed Zonia Duval, Dot Darling and Isobel Brown.

You Can Be Beautiful

Goat's Milk In Cosmetics

By ARLINE GOULD

YOU CAN bet that if Cleopatra had known how much superior goat's milk was to the cow variety, she'd have solved a lot of transportation difficulties by hauling around the nimbler, lighter animal! For she did traipse around with a special herd and special milkers! All for the sake of her complexion!

Science . . . in analyzing goat's milk discovered why it was so superior for medical purposes . . . discovered its richness of vitamins and alkalines. That's what determined the owners of perhaps the finest herd of pedigreed goats in this country to turn all-pervading goodness of goat's milk into the finest cosmetics in the land!

Perfumed with apple blossom extracts, real ones, and straight from the trees on the farm itself . . . these amazing new cosmetics are here today, and are being featured by a Boston shop.

If your skin hasn't been as smooth and soft as you'd expect this spring . . . we suggest that you waste no time before using the complete line-up of beauty aids . . . from the cleansing and massage cream . . . to the night-texture cream and lotion. These are made from curds, filtered and mixed with proteins to produce smoothly delightful creams and lotions. Strangely enough, no artificial preservatives are used.

Though you'll want the full sizes . . . you may like to start off with the introductory box, which includes the creams and lotions mentioned above, and a face powder . . . everything for a dollar! Since the smallest regular size of these creams is $1.25, you can see what a buy this introductory kit is. It will be available for a short time only.

You're going to experience something rather marvelous after you've used the creams and lotion for a week . . . because your skin will be softer, smoother and clearer!

If you'd like complete information on these remarkable new beauty aids, and the short-time introductory kit for $1, phone Arline Gould, LIBerty 4000, weekdays except Saturday, or write, care of the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

FOR A SKIN with the enchanting freshness and charm of Jean Arthur's you have to go a little out of your way . . . to find beauty aids so beneficial and good that they coddle and nurture it to a wonderful, radiant softness and smoothness . . . and today Arline Gould says that her discovery of new creams and lotions is just the thing to do this!

Beef Dumplings--How Nice!

By MARTHA LEE

EVERY BUDGETING HOMEMAKER knows that it is the attractive appearance and good flavor of a dish that make it a favorite no matter how inexpensive it may be.

The dish may be prepared from fresh food, newly purchased, or from left-overs so tactfully and tastefully presented that their second appearance is as appealing as their original role.

Hamburger is fairly inexpensive, depending upon the cut, and is liked by most people. A recipe we would like you to try calls for ground round steak—for Beef Dumplings with Ketchup Butter Sauce. These dumplings are a tempting golden brown when they come out of the oven.

BEEF DUMPLINGS WITH KETCHUP BUTTER SAUCE

1 lb. ground round steak
2 tbsp. shortening or bacon fat
1 tsp. salt
½ cup tomato ketchup
2 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
1 tbsp. flour
¼ cup water
Rich biscuit dough or pastry

Brown the steak in the fat; add salt, ketchup, Worcestershire sauce and flour, mixing well. Add water, then cook, stirring constantly until thickened. Roll rich biscuit dough or pastry thin. Cut into 5-inch squares. Place an equal amount of meat mixture in center of each square, then bring edges together and pinch or press with tines of a fork. Bake in a hot oven (450 deg. F.) 15 minutes. Serve hot with ketchup butter sauce.

KETCHUP BUTTER SAUCE

Combine equal proportions of ketchup and butter. Heat, then serve over beef dumplings. Use two tablespoons per serving.

There are usually enough vegetables of one kind or other left over from last night's dinner. Make a combination of these vegetables and serve them in a Vegetable Casserole. Here's a satisfying noontime repast with bread and butter and a glass of milk.

VEGETABLE CASSEROLE

1 cup asparagus soup, condensed
1-3 cup milk
1½ tsp. grated onion
¼ tsp. paprika
Salt and pepper to taste
1 cup peas, cooked
1 cup lima beans, cooked
1 cup diced carrots, cooked
½ cup grated cheese
½ cup fine bread crumbs

Open can of soup, pour into saucepan and heat; add milk, onion, paprika, salt and pepper. Stir in vegetables and blend well, then transfer to 1½ quart size casserole. Top mixture with grated cheese and bread crumbs. Have the oven preheated to moderate or 375 deg. and bake the dish for 25 to 30 minutes. This should make 6 servings.

Here's a suggestion for extending the eggs when scrambling them. It also uses up a bit of left-over canned corn.

CORN SCRAMBLED IN EGGS

1 cup cooked corn
1 cup tomato juice or tomato soup
4 eggs, slightly beaten
Grated cheese
2 tbsp. butter
Onion, minced
Green pepper, chopped
Salt, paprika

Melt butter, add corn, onion and peppers and cook until onions are golden. Stir in tomato juice, or soup and heat thoroughly. Lower heat and add eggs and seasoning. Stir constantly and cook until set. Sprinkle with grated cheese and serve over toast.

It's the serving that satiates that puts on the pounds. You can sense that shortly after a full meal when your belt draws too snug for comfort and you let it out a notch, then another. Then you wish you hadn't taken that fifth spare rib and extra slice of bread.

Your main trouble is the habit of over-eating. It keeps you from knowing when you have had enough until you have had too much. To break it, make a staunch practice of leaving the table while you still feel as if you could eat a little more. If in doubt as to whether it's actual hunger or just that "old debbil" appetite, how about some spinach, or a little more green salad?

Probably the delectable sugars and starches are all that take your fancy and it's up to you to resist them. When you have been away from the table for 10 minutes, you'll find you no longer crave food of any kind. That plan is perfectly practical.

There's no reason why you should let your appetite get the better of you. You can have an abundance of food low in calories. Suppose you start your meal with a cup of piping hot bouillon—that counts only 25 calories, and doesn't it taste good? And instead of having crackers with it, munch on celery.

LOCAL BOY makes good . . . Boston society has contributed a number of feminine stars to Broadway's hit parade . . . but seldom do conservative members of the Back Bay set have an opportunity of turning out to acclaim one of their neighbor's sons in an honest to goodness big time show . . .

Most Boston society iads with theatrical aspirations have their fling at acting in Hasty Pudding shows and let it go at that . . . but occasionally one gets a break in the Big Time and causes a lot of excitement and envy among his friends and former playmates . . .

Such was the case with Gappy Bacon who starred in summer stock last year and is now in Hollywood making a movie . . . and last night Frederick Bradlee 3d, son of the F. J. Bradlees of Beacon st., made his Boston debut as a professional actor in "Theater," the new Theater Guild play starring Cornelia Otis Skinner . . .

JULIA DEANE of Boston, left, and Mrs. Bradley Dewey, Jr., of Cambridge, spend a busy morning helping with plans for the Empire Junior Dance, first official affair o fthe new debutante season. The dance will be held Saturday evening at the Hotel Vendome to benefit the New England Regional Scholarship fund of Bryn Mawr.

Freddie's family, and many of their friends and his, were on hand to give him a big welcome and the audience was so full of Harvardians and post-debs that it seemed like a Pudding opening . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Bradlee arrived early in a party with their daughter Connie, and Mrs. Means Devens . . . and so great was their excitement over the occasion that they even provided tickets for some of their servants to sit in the balcony . . . Connie, one of the pretty debs of last winter, wore a jade green dinner gown trimmed with gold embroidery while her mother was as fashionably turned out as ever in buttercup yellow with a short fur jacket . . . Connie was escorted by Bob Bacon who has had the leading feminine roles in the past two Pudding shows . . .

Cynthia Reece and Toni Sargent were in a twosome, while Toni's mother, Mrs. Fitzwilliam Sargent, a prominent actress in her own right, was in another jolly party . . . Lucy and Nancy Cochrane, who have been childhood playmates of Freddie Bradlees on the North Shore, were surrounded by a flock of escorts, and post deb Jean Clark marched way down front with her escort . . . Jean's blue and white cotton Tahitian print was very springlike under a jacket of summer ermine . . .

Mrs. Robert M. P. Kennard wore a filmy chiffon gown made of panels of chartreuse and gray . . . while another summery costume was the pink and blue worn by Mrs. Delcivere King . . . Over a hooded blue gown, made with a pleated skirt, she wore a flared peach faille coat . . .

Mrs. Hamilton Osgood, Jr., walking down Boylston st. after a busy session at Boston Garden dismantling decorations and returning borrowed paraphernalia used at the Carnival for Freedom . . . She wore a modish navy pin striped suit with a jaunty navy and white hat and yards of fine veiling . . .

Debutante Margaret Gardiner, daughter of the former governor of Maine, arriving at secretarial school with shorthand notebooks tucked under her arm . . .

Mrs. Amor Hollingsworth, Jr., selecting wedding gifts for June brides and looking very smart in a navy and white shepard check suit with a big navy hat, red gloves and purse . . .

IN ORDER not to allow their social life to interfere with college board exams in mid-June, Sylvia and Dorothy Fry are planning their debut party for June 20 after the final exams have been written . . . Their party will be a tea dance at the spacious Brookline estate of their mother, Mrs. Dorothy Whipple Fry . . . New Black Frocks Arrive

By ANNICE BRINK

EVERY GIRL is going to have something filmy and black this summer . . . which she will wear with a large black hat . . . and which she may team up with black sheer stockings, and long black gloves . . . remembering to light all this up with a tremendous splash of white or pastel contrast somewhere . . . to judge by the marvelously tempting new black frocks that have invaded the town.

You can buy them in practically any price range . . . and in any "density" . . . depending on the purpose . . . the opaque triple sheers being good for afternoon town wear . . . the transparent georgette types only for really festive doings, not for any town trotting whatsoever.

They may be trimmed with black lace, in narrow or wide bands. And the quality of this lace depends on how much you can spend. Some are trimmed with embroidered white accents . . . Broderie Anglais type . . . or even pale pink or pale blue as well as white organdy. If you're going to a wedding in June, you'll probably do the "among those present" gang proud in just this type of outfit.

High, simple necklines are relatively few among these filmy black charmers. Sometimes the neckline is one of those "plunge" types which is a very deep and narrow V. Most of them are be-frilled or dressed up. These are hardly "basic" frocks! They're sufficient unto themselves.

One number which is purely adorable has narrow-lace edged sheer flares collaring the shoulders in a wide V neckline . . . accented with a bright pink silk rose . . . and the lace-edged flare, very full trails down the front of the skirt to the hem.

Utility Ruling Curbs Rates

Gas and electric companies no longer may fix rates with an eye toward future tax jumps, according to a decision handed down by the State Public Utilities Department.

The ruling came when a new rate schedule submitted by the Lawrence Gas and Electric Co., contained a clause looking ahead to a possible increase over the rates submitted in the event of a rise in taxes assignable to gas operations.

"The approval of a tax clause is tantamount to the granting of a rate increase" the department stated, adding, "a tax clause as proposed gives the company the opportunity to charge its customers the increased taxes without striving to meet them either by effecting operating economies or increasing revenue by increasing sales."

Episcopal Diocese In 156th Conclave

Representatives from all parishes in the Episcopal diocese of Massachusetts arrived here today for the 156th annual convention of the diocese, to be featured by the annual report of Bishop Henry Knox Sherrill tonight.

Bishop Raymond A. Heron will also deliver his annual message and Bishops William Lawrence and Samuel G. Babcock will take part in the service.

Protest Balks Police Advances

Protests by Patrick Cronin, president of the Chelsea aldermen, today held up confirmation of Mayor Edward J. Voke's appointments of four new police sergeants, which would bring the total number of superior officers to 23, one for each two men in the department.

Patrolmen James H. Martin, Stanley A. Gryzbinski, John C. Pike and Ralph Eaves were named by the mayor, who passed over the names of Patrolman John J. Pahey, first on the list of eligibles, and Patrolman William A. Hanley, third.

Confirmation of the appointments will be delayed at least one week as the result of Alderman Cronin's objection.

In the Groove

By Anthony Rud

JOCK McNEIL was only 23, a year out of Columbia, and a rather brilliant assistant pro at the Burning Bush Country Club, when he made the curious discovery. Of course that was way back in the beginning of the Twerpy Twenties.

Then, even assistant pros were paid good, substantial salaries, got married and generally looked forward to hitting the jackpot the way Gene Sarazen, Mac Smith and others were doing.

But Jock and his wife Rennie were cautious people. They believed in frugality, growing bank accounts and decent living. So even in that era of wild spending, Jock had a habit of tamping down the load of tobacco in his pipe, and smoking many matches for each filling. The club furnished matches free.

Rennie sewed most of her own clothes. She put new collars and cuffs on Jock's dress shirts, darned the sweaters, and even rewove his golf-hose when he snagged them on a fence nail. Jock always seemed better dressed than even Alex Jaxon, his chief.

When Jock Junior came, Rennie made all his clothes. Jock gave the baby a couple of new repaints to play with, and talked about cutting down the shaft of a light mid-iron putter for the infant to use, soon as he could toddle erect.

The family budget became more carefully audited than ever. Jock now banked an additional 5 per cent of his salary and lesson fees. The saving, of course, was sacrosanct. No matter what else pinched, that came first.

It was funny, too, just where the worst cases of self-denial arose. Always on the smallest, unremembered items. Rennie would run out of cleansing tissue, or face cream, or would need a spool of white thread, or a new double socket for the vacuum cleaner, or they would use up the last tooth powder just when the exchequer was down to nine cents on the afternoon before pay day.

With any other people those minor crises would have been met by a to heck-with-it gesture. But then the other people, on the same income, would not have been looking forward to college for each child in turn, a competence for old age for themselves, and a stake for each youngster who wanted to go into business in later years.

> The Cast of Characters in "In the Groove"
>
> JOCK McNEIL, a golf club pro who believes in budgets, but when his son,
>
> JOCK, JR. becomes a movie star, Dad finds it hard to become reconciled.

Once on such a day of poverty, Jock walked six miles each way to the North Shore Club on Long Island Sound to get a bag of clubs for a member and patron. The bus fare had been 15 cents each way. This in the Lush and Twerpy Twenties, remember!

A DISCOVERY!

It had been just before then that Jock made his curious discovery, the tiny, incidental one which later would bulk so large to him. He had a sandy red beard, rather luxuriant, which he had to shave every morning—and then again in the evening, if he was to make any sort of social appearance. But he did not go out very much of nights, things being as they were.

However, one morning of July 1—and the year might have been 1923—Jock put a new refill stick of shaving soap into his nickel-plated holder. Oddly it flashed to mind right then that it had been exactly six months before, to the day, when he had put in the stick that now had shrunk to a wafer, and vanished in lather.

The years came, and the years went, and always now on exactly the first of January, and the first of July, it came about that Jock put a newly purchased refill stick in his holder.

Once or twice there had been the wraith of the heel of a stick left, but so little Jock felt reasonable as well as generous with himself, in tossing it away. On a couple of occasions, particularly after he became chief pro at the club, and won the Metropolitan Open Championship at Salisbury, he had a good many club dinners and other festive evening occasions to attend. These meant extra shaves, of course, and so along toward the last fortnight in June, and the last two weeks of December, Jock would have to take his knife, carefully unscrew the bit of soap remaining in the end of the holder, take off the tinfoil, and then soap his wet beard with the quarter-inch of soap flake remaining.

But even if he had to get along with a rather light lather a few times, he made it a private fetish never to touch the newly-purchased stick until the dawn of the first of the month—January or July. In time he became highly pleased at the automatic way this worked out. It was one of the stanchions of a sober, quiet life—and it remained, even after the bank shut down for that sad month, and two mortgages the McNeils owned were defaulted in the black days of 1932.

ON BROADWAY

Jock's salary was cut in half and for a while it looked as though golf was something that has passed forever out of American life. There were two more young ones now and Jock Junior was 12—a bright lad, already able to break 85 on the 6850-yard course. He was good in school, of course and just now had been doing something rather shocking to Jock, but which actually brought in some money at a time it was gravely needed. And Jock somehow always had been able to manipulate his Furtuneiel conscience a trifle, when that meant money coming in rather than going out. The other way around? Never!

The lad had been taken by a play producer, and was one of a gang of 12 appearing in a show similar to "Dead End." For this the astonishingly liberal pay producer had been willing to pay $50 a week, as long as the play remained on Broadway. And it stayed 19 weeks.

That was not all. Right then, realizing that this tough kid drama was a new bonanza, Hollywood movie producers leapt to bring out films based on the same formula. Since there were nowhere near enough child movie actors to go around, they flew East and hunted down all of the youngsters who had been playing in the legitimate drama.

Jock Junior, attended by Rennie, flew West on a six months' contract, during the life of which the 12-year-old was to receive the astounding sum of $250 a week! It was more than Jock had earned even that single golden year when he had won the Met. Open, and been runner-up in the National Open Championship!

The old man was proud, but disturbed. He missed his wife and boy. The two young ones now were being ably tended by his wife's maiden aunt, and were getting along all right. But no one paid much attention to Jock. He sucked on his empty bird and brooded.

Things in the golf world were going all to pieces. He did not even with the dismal truth to his beloved Rennie, when the exclusive Burning Bush Club opened its gates to greens fee visitors. Jock's salary had been cut to $2500 a year, and there was practically no chance to make additional money out of lessons any more. Jock felt smirched and disgraced by having a child of his helping to support the family.

But worse things were to come. Even when his first contract was out, Jock Junior stayed in Hollywood. He was going to school there.

Jock Junior, attended by Rennie, flew West on a six months' contract.

When the new clubhouse was ready, he could work again. But [illegible] "We aren't living on savings," Rennie [illegible]

About the first of June, Jock [illegible] with love, [illegible] Rectedly appeared to throw her arms around her stocky husband. The aunt with Jock Junior and the two youngsters were coming in a cab. She had just had to race to Jock . . . and tell him they had a whole month now of vacation, before work on Jock Junior's new picture would start. This would be the last one for four years, too. He would go to college, and there would be a place for him at the end of that time if he wanted it.

"And dear!" cried the woman, "there's a bit part for you in this next picture! All you have to do is play a few shots in front of the camera. The hero will win, of course—but will you accept $200 a week for twelve weeks?"

"Firm," said Jock. "Is the money good?"

So it was that Rennie gave the house a whirlwind cleaning, incidentally throwing out a whole half inch of shaving soap which Jock was hoarding. Of course, she had forgotten his fetish.

Of course Jock found out next morning and was disturbed. A habit of years had been broken. But Rennie was talking, as he scowled blankly: "You'll have to have a bit of a beard, in the picture, Jock, dear," she was saying. "You're an old-time British pro. You better start letting it grow now . . ."

Then she looked up startled, as the door man, suddenly relieved and happy, grabbed her in a fierce embrace and kissed her.

He would probably never tell her, but in actual fact he was happiest about not having to shave for a while. The loss of that heel of soap would not matter now. He could get back in the groove again and even be a little bit extravagant about shaving soap, through the whole of a new six-month period!

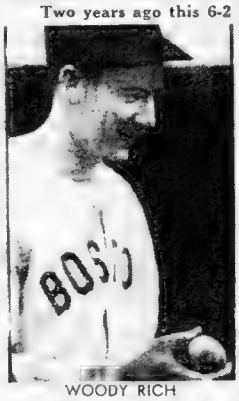
HOPE SOX HAVEN'T 'BOOTED' IN SENDING RICH TO MINORS

DETROIT, April 29 — Woody Rich goes down the drain pipe for the third time. What could the matter be?

Two years ago this 6-2 right hander from the backwoods of North Carolina reported to the Red Sox at Sarasota. He had won 19 games under Doc Prothro at Little Rock in '38 after a late start. He was a sensation from the first day in camp.



WOODY RICH

Tommy Daly, Sox third base coach, took one peek at him, and said: "Wouldn't he remind you of Old Grover Cleveland Alexander?" And in truth, he would, side-wheeling the ball in with terrific power.

Woodrow Wilson Rich, born March 9, 1917, was no flash in the pan. He continued his good work on the way north. He won four games for the Sox in late April and early May. He was the ace of the staff. He would be the 20-game winner Jack Wilson was supposed to be. Everybody said so.

But things didn't turn out that way. The Sox shoved Woody in against Detroit one cold, rainy day in May of '39. He had had only a couple of days rest but the Yankees were coming to town on the week-end and the Sox wanted to use him against both clubs. Well, Woody faced the Tigers, all right and beat them, but he never did face the Yanks because he came up with a sore arm during the course of the afternoon. The Sox won a game, and lost a pitcher.

Woody dawdled around Fenway Park for a time. While the Sox were out West, he reported to the park each morning, had his arm rubbed and baked by Johnny Orlando and ran around the park to keep his weight down.

His arm didn't come around, however, and he was shipped off to Louisville. He was a worried, disillusioned boy, and he didn't pick up there. Nor did he a year ago. He hurt his ankle down south, and by the time it was healed he was overweight. The other pitchers were ahead of him, and just after the bell rang he was shipped to Scranton, no less.

Big League sensation in the spring of '39! Just a Class A pitcher in the spring of '40!

At Scranton he was joined by his pal Bill Butland, a Minneapolis hero in '39 who, like Rich, had contracted a sore arm with the Sox, and who now found himself in Class A ball after being a 19-game winner with a Double A club the year before. Progress, with reverse English.

On July 4, however, the imperturbable Mickey Harris was also shipped to Scranton and did much to help his old pal. Together, late in the season, they got together and helped pitch Scranton to the Eastern League pennant. Then Woody came up to the Sox and beat the A's near the season's close.

It seemed to put new life into him, and he reported at the camp in Sarasota this spring as healthy a young animal as he was in '39, his "Alexander" year. And he acted it.

▼ ▼ ▼

He was even more sensational than he was in '39. He actually was knocking the bats out of the boys' hands in batting practice. None wanted to hit against him. His fast ball drove in on the handles of right handers bats with a zing that filled the air with curses. He seemed actually unhittable.

He was great all during the time Sox were in the South. The world champion Cincinnati Reds were loud in their praise of his ability. He was the first Sox pitcher to go the route, turning the trick against a Cuban team in Havana.

All during the spring press conferences, Manager Joe Cronin would rate the "pitching of Woody Rich and Mickey Harris" as the No. 1 feat of the spring campaign.

Why sour on him so quickly? He didn't look any too good against the Bees in the city series or against the A's last Saturday, anybody will admit, but it was just on that type of cold and windy day, two years ago that he injured his arm. And who knows what thoughts were running through his mind?

There are some fellows on the club who claim Woody isn't mentally equipped to be a big league pitcher; that he has a defeatist complex. Well, he certainly didn't have one when he was burning up the league two years ago. Where did he get it, and why?

▼ ▼ ▼

He looked like the Sox No. 1 pitcher in the South. Everybody admitted it. He got two brief chances in Arctic weather to prove he had it. Yet other pitchers on the club can get shellacked repeatedly and still be rated starters.

It is all very difficult to comprehend. We sincerely hope that the Sox, whose chant year in and year out is "Give us the pitching and we'll win the pennant," haven't booted one in Woodrow Wilson Rich. He looked as if he had it.

Bees Open Home Stay Against Wilson's Cubs

By FRANK FENWAY

Inaugurating a long and, it is hoped, prosperous home stay, the Boston Bees today attempt annihilation of Jimmy Wilson's Chicago Cubs in a battle to gain mastery of the second division.

By grace of some several percentage points, the Cubs at present hold the number five spot in the National League standing. The Bees are the same number of games from the top as Wilson's wallopers, however, and a win for the Bees today will shoot them by their opponents.

It has been fairly reasonably established that the Bees are a better ball club than the Phillies, and not quite as good a club as the Dodgers, and this home stay should now furnish an idea as to how they compare with the rest of the National League.

Still spouting nothing but optimism, Casey Stengel announced he will send the impressive-looking Hartford hurler of last season, Frank Lamanna, to the mound in the opener.

Awfully good as a relief pitcher thus far, Lamanna will really have to have it in this first start as he opposes Claude Passeau, top man of the Chicago staff and a nemesis of the Stengelites.

The Cubs will enter the fray strengthened by the signing yesterday of slugging Hank Leiber, holdout of long standing, and the return of Augie Galan, whose ailing knee is reportedly better.

NOVIKOFF IN SLUMP

Musically, it is feared, they will be below par, for when Galan goes in out comes harmonica-playing Lou Novikoff, whose prelude in G minor has passed muster up in the majors, but whose hitting emphatically has not.

The colorful Russian, who pasted all sorts of pitching on the coast, has batted only .176 in 10 games for the Chicago outfit and as a result finds himself sitting this one out.

Whether or not Novikoff's demotion is permanent is problematical. Wilson, naturally, can't allow an accomplished ball player like Galan to sit around idle while a publicized rookie fails to deliver.

On the other hand, it is hardly fair to condemn a gent on but 10 days' trial during unseasonable weather, particularly when that gent comes as well recommended as does Larruping Lou the Second.

If Leiber is able to start play immediately he will probably go to first base, where Phil Cavaretta and Cambridge Eddie Waitkus have been alternately filling in.

SISTI AT THIRD

Waitkus was given the spot outright at the start of spring training, but apparently Jimmy Wilson has decided he did not show enough to retain it. The Cambridge youngster did a slick job in the Texas League the last two seasons and it was believed he was ready. Perhaps he will be able to win the job back as the season progresses.

The Bees will field the club that polished off the Phillies so handily Sunday, except that Sibby Sisti will be playing third base in place of Heinie Majeskie.

Always a hitter, Majeskie was believed to have struck his stride in the week-end contest when he rapped out a pair of doubles to drive in three runs.

Stengel, however, is strong for Sisti and refuses to quit on the Buffalo youngster, who has looked rather ragged since the season started. Casey figures that once Sibby gets rolling he'll be more than adequate.

If he doesn't produce Majeskie will be back.

TAKING IT EASY—Max West, Bees left fielder who was stricken with an attack of ptomaine in N. Y., rested this morning in his apartment but says he feels well enough to face the Chicago Cubs this afternoon.

Dodgers Set Pace

By Associated Press

The Cincinnati Reds last year were world champions, and they may be again, but it must be said at this early date that other teams have improved while the Reds have remained stationary.

The champs came east yesterday and bumped into the Brooklyn Dodgers, one of the National League's improved clubs. Their clash was a battle of titans, but the Dodgers emerged with their seventh successive victory, 3-2, and took over first place in the senior circuit, while the Reds were left languishing in fourth place.

The Reds had good pitching—a six-hit job by their veteran ace, Paul Derringer. They had their customary flawless fielding—including one of the most spectacular catches of the young season when Ival (Poison Ivy) Goodman stood almost against the right field fence, 300 feet from the plate, and jumped high to spear a liner in the sixth inning. They had as good an offense as the Dodgers—six hits, including a home run by Buck McCormick.

FANS 10 REDS

But the Dodgers had that "zing" that challengers sometimes get and champions eventually lose.

Whitlow Wyatt, near 31 years of age and getting bald, struck out ten of the champs and held them to six hits, too. When McCormick's homer put the Reds in front, the Dodgers had what it took to get back in front—a single by Jim Wasdell and a home run by Alex Kampouris, who led the International League in circuit-swatting last year. When the Reds tied the score through Ernesto Natali Lombardi's triple in the seventh, the Dodgers had what was needed to win in the ninth—a single with two on by old Whit Wyatt himself.

The Reds haven't skidded, but to finish 12 games in front of the Dodgers last year they had to win 41 games by one run and Brooklyn had to fall into a lot of trouble like Joe Medwick's beaning, Harry Lavagetto's appendicitis operation, Wyatt's sore arm and Pewee Reese's broken heel bone.

You can bet that the fighting is going to be a lot fiercer this year. The St. Louis Cardinals are in the middle of it, also. The Were idle yesterday, along with the rest of the league but today were to open their eastern swing against the third-place New York Giants.

CHISOX TIE FOR THIRD

The American League action has switched to the west. While the eastern teams were traveling yesterday, the Cleveland Indians reinforced their grip on first place by drubbing the Detroit Tigers, 7-2. The Chicago White Sox moved into a third-place tie with a 2-1 edge over the St. Louis Browns.

The contest at Cleveland started out as a hurling duel between Al Milnar and young Hal Newhouser, who was a great help to Detroit last year before developing arm trouble.

Newhouser showed he still is a potentially great pitcher by striking out nine men and allowing only four hits in six innings, but he was wilder than Larry MacPhail after reading one of Judge Landis' decisions. The 19-year-old southpaw gave nine walks and had to be removed with nobody out in the seventh, when he made a wild pitch with the bases loaded on two passes and an error. In the previous frame he loaded the bases on two walks and a single, ahead of a single by Roy Weatherly. Meanwhile, Milnar hurled steady, six-hit ball and fanned five.

The White Sox beat the Browns simply because they put their eight hits closer together than St. Louis did its 11. Rookie Jack Hallett, a 6-foot 4-inch right-hander, who was with Shreveport last season, survived the full nine innings for the victory.

CRONIN, WILLIAMS IN SOX LINEUP

Grove Hurls Detroit Opener

By HERB FINNEGAN

DETROIT, April 29 — Manager Joe Cronin and Ted Williams returned to the lineup today as the Red Sox opened their first western swing of the year against the Detroit Tigers here. Not only that but Cronin threw his best Tiger Tamer into the fray, one Robert Moses Grove, 41-year-old southpaw.

Grove's opponent was to be Johnny Gorsica.

The chips are really down for the Sox on this trip. They have won 7, lost 4 to date, a good record, but all seven victories have been gained against Washington and the Athletics, reputedly a couple of second division clubs.

Against the Yankees, they lost the only two games they played.

In the West, they will face stiff competition all the way. Two games with the A. L. champions here, then two in Cleveland, three in St. Louis and two in Chicago.

BARTELL SIDELINED

Detroit, ostensibly below par, nevertheless is the league champion. It got good pitching last year and should get it again this year.

It still has Newsom, Bridges, Rowe, Newhouser and Gorsica. It still has the slugging Hank Greenberg, Rudy York et al.

One important change has been made in the lineup, the replacing of Dick Bartell at short with Croucher. But Bartell is still around in case the younger player doesn't hold up.

Cleveland has the best balanced club in the league, with Bob Feller the spearhead; the White Sox are always troublesome, while the Browns are supposed to be the most improved club in the league. We'll see.

The Sox left Pete Fox behind recuperating from a jaw operation and may be without the former Tiger the 10 days they are in the West. But if Ted Williams is able to navigate at all, his hitting will more than balance his inability to cover ground on his injured right ankle. He has Dom DiMaggio alongside him, and Dom usually covers enough ground for any two outfielders.

SOX PITCHING BRIGHTER

Cronin was out of the lineup last Friday and Saturday with a severe cold but the week-end rest of two days has put him on his feet again. Cronin, when he left the lineup, was the team's leading hitter, and his punch will be welcome.

The pitching outlook is much brighter than it has been. Charlie Wagner, Dick Newsome and Bill Fleming have all come up with well pitched games during the past week and all look as if they might help the club. With pitching, the Sox will be hard to stop because for six years now they have been the heaviest batting team in either league.

If the Sox can clean up here, or do better than break even, they will start their first long home stand on May 10 in a good position to make trouble for them all during the race.

Diamond Gems

Pitching champs down through the years . . . why Clark Griffith, the "Old Fox" among current American League managers, won 24 games on the mound for Washington back in 1901 . . . pitching for Yankees back in 1904 long before they became the bombing crew that Ruppert drew, Jack Chesbro won 41 games while losing 13 and that's the modern record (since 1900) for most games won in a season . . . spit-baller Ed Walsh of the White Sox came closest to Chesbro's mark in 1908 with 40 wins . . . stop dreaming about pitchers who can win 40 games, you Red Sox boosters . . . "Iron Man" Joe McGinnity won 35 for the Giants in 1904 and four years later another John McGraw miracle man, the late, beloved by millions, Christy Mathewson, the "Big Six," won 37.—WHIT CUSHING.

BLUE PAIR RUMORED UNFIT FOR 'BLUE GRASS CLASSIC'

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 29 (AP)—Topping off the list of circumstances that makes this the "different Derby," a report went the rounds today that the Derby trial mile this afternoon may uncover an injury to keep the $40,000 Blue Pair out of Saturday's run for the roses.

Starting from apparently well founded sources, this rumor said the colt that Tom Bragg, the California and New York investmen broker, bought from C. C. Van Meter for $40,000 less than two weeks ago had turned up with a splint ailment and a sore back and that his performance in the annual mile "preview" would decide his chances of getting to the post Saturday.

Trainer Willie Crump refused to discuss the whole thing, but it was noted that the atmosphere around Blue Pair's stable was not of the holiday variety that usually stamps an optimistic Derby barn.

ARCARO TO RIDE WHIRLAWAY

At any rate this possibility and the showing—if any—of a colt named Sporting, purchased recently by Dan Witheis of Chicago, are the only factors which save today's trial stake from being just a $2500 workout.

So far as Warren Wright's Whirlaway and the four others in the field of seven are concerned the whole thing might just as well be a barn dance. Whirlaway, to be ridden by Eddie Arcaro Saturday, will go to the post Saturday, win, lose or scratch today, and the other quartet—Cadmium, Shaun G., Quintillian and Burman—won't get in the Derby even through the back door, according to their trainers.

Sporting arrived at the Downs a day or so ago and no one around knows much about him. He ran as a $2500 selling plater at Oaklawn as recently as March 1, and just why Withers thinks he has a chance in the "big heat" is one of the little mysteries that make this 67th Derby as bizarre as it now shapes up.

WORTHY NEWCOMERS

For, a run down of the probable Derby field of 12 shows that the "F. F. V." so far as racing in general and the Blue Grass classic in particular are concerned, are definitely among the missing this time. Only four in the field have ever entered a horse in the Derby before, and only one of these, Wright, has made any kind of a habit out of it in recent years.

Otherwise they represent the "butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker of the turf." There's Lou Tufano, a Jamaica, Long Island contractor who owns Market Wise, and Rocky Palladino, who owns Little Beans and was a tavern owner in Boston, and Charley Howard, whose phenomenal luck has come up with Porter's Cap this year. He's an automobile distributor in California. Royce Martin of Toledo and J. Fred Byers of Pittsburgh own Our Boots and Robert Morris, respectively. Martin manufactures automobile accessories, Byers steel.

Then, too, there are the horses themselves this year. Most of them are strictly hot and cold colts. One time out they'll run like champions. The next, as one press box wag put it, "They'll go like $1500 selling platers, although the regular platers might not want them in the club."

Yesterday's Stars

By the Associated Press

WHITLOW WYATT, Dodgers—Held Reds to six hits and batted in winning run with single in ninth.

AL MILNAR, Indians—Pitched six-hit victory over Tigers.

BILLY KNICKERBOCKER, White Sox—Handled eight fielding chances flawlessly at second base and contributed two hits to triumph over Browns.

Neyland Back to First Love

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., April 29 (AP)—Uncle Sam's fighting forces won't be pushed around much if the Army does as well as did Tennessee's Volunteers under Maj. Robert R. Neyland.

In establishing the Vols as one of the nation's great football teams, the major employed a lot of lessons he learned as a West Point Cadet and then as a young officer in the Engineer Corps.

He found a place on the gridiron for such stuff as split second precision, complicated maneuvers and a modicum of pageantry—stuff he picked up on the drill grounds and in engineering work.

20 YEARS COACHING

It all paid off for the Vols sending them to three post season bowls in successive years and for the major himself—enabling him to become one of the nation's highest paid coaches.

Now the major is to return to the service—his first love—and he'll be taking with him a lot of tricks he picked up in 20 years of coaching when he reports at Norfolk, Va., next month. He was ordered to Army duty yesterday.

Just how valuable the lessons are Neyland has learned in the handling of men, mapping out strategy for Saturday afternoon battles, and in the use of practical psychology will be determined later.

The major thinks they are valuable.

6 OD DEFENSE

One afternoon last fall when the talk switched from the bright prospects for his third undefeated, untied season to the major's favorite subject, the Army, he observed:

"I believe the experiences I've had in teaching young men to play football have been as beneficial to me—an Army man—as was the early training I received in the Army."

The major talked about the problems he has had to solve in welding groups of strong-willed, individualistic, awkward youths into smooth-working, effective football machines.

"For having had this experience," he said, "I believe I would make a better officer if ever I return to active service."

One thing the major will be taking back to the Army with him—certainly in step with congressional opinion—is his belief that "a good defense is the best offense."

Harvard Crews Win Four Races

Harvard's crews won four of five races to retain the Rowe Memorial Cup on the Charles River.

Tom Bolles, huskies won the varsity brush by a length of open water in the time of 6:56.2 for the Henley distance of a mile and five-sixteenths. Tech was second, about 6½ lengths ahead of B. U. which trailed.

Harvard likewise won the jayvee thrash, in 7.04, or two and one-half lengths ahead of Tech, which showed about 12 lengths to B. U.

Tech won the freshman race, its first frosh victory over Harvard, in four oars. Jim McMillan's huskies won by 2½ lengths. The time was 7:18. B. U. trailed Harvard by eight lengths.

Harvard won an informal 150-pound jayvee race by nine lengths over Tech's entry, which caught a crab at the mile marker.

'Pulled Horses' Cost Public $4,000,000

LOS ANGELES, April 29 (INS)—Crooked horse races, engineered by the "gambling poison" syndicate, cost the betting public at least $4,000,000 at Del Mar and Hollywood Park.

This was the contention which the prosecution in the race fix trial sought to support by testimony late today before a superior court jury.

For the first time, in a summary by Anthony Y. Joyce, investigator for the district attorney, concrete figures showing the amount bet on "pulled" horses that were predestined by a little group of gamesters to lose were produced.

Joyce summarized the records of the clerk of the scales and of the pari-mutuel departments at the Hollywood and Del Mar racing strips.

According to the prosecution these sheets showed the records of 60 fixed races.

OLYMPIC HOCKEY STARS JOIN UP WITH COLORS

MEMBERS OF THE Boston Olympics hockey club have put away their sticks and joined up with Uncle Sam's military forces.

The list of players who at one time or another have worn the uniforms of the Olympics and who are now in service is as follows:

Jim Roberts, former Harvard star, ensign at Brooklyn Navy Yard.

Ray Foster, Colby, aviation, Ft. Benning.

Jim Feeley, Dartmouth, Marine Aviation School, Pensacola, Fla.

Buddy Foster, Melrose, Naval Aviation, Pensacola, Fla.

Eddie Aronson, trainer of junior Olympics, Camp Edwards.

Arthur Duffey, Naval Aviation, San Diego.

Cliff Thompson, closing out personal affairs as he plans to enlist.

CLIFF THOMPSON

By the Fall these members of the Olympics will be joined by many of their teammates. The list above shows that the hockey players like the aviation service. This is also true of most other star athletes. There is something about dancing through the sky in an army or naval plane that appeals to the youth of America.

"I do not know where I am going to get players for the Olympics for next season if the present emergency continues," declared Walter Brown, General Manager of the Garden. "Hockey players as a group are physically fit. Youngsters who can take the hammering that is the lot of hockey players do not experience any trouble passing the physical tests for the aviation service or any other department of the Army or Navy they prefer."

Bruins Will Face Problem Next Season

THE FUTURE OF the Bruins is also faced with much uncertainty. Most of the members of the Bruins are Canadians. Under the Canadian military law, it has been possible for athletes to take part of their compulsory military service during the off months. As a result, most of the Bruins took three months of military service last Summer.

It was then possible for the players to return to their regular jobs on the Bruins.

People close to hockey recognize the fact many of the professional stars may decide to enlist before next season. If they fail to do so, they may not be able to retain standing in this country, especially with American hockey players, baseball stars, boxers and other star athletes in service for at least a year.

If Canada should pass a full time draft, most of the Bruins would have to serve.

Meanwhile most American athletes are accepting their military service as a duty. Those athletes who have been making big money in professional sport wish, of course, that it was not necessary for them to join the Army or the Navy, but now that the emergency exists with a very few exceptions they are willing to do their duty.

Hugh Mulcahy, the Phillies' pitcher who lives in Brighton, and Steve Casey, the former heavyweight wrestling champion, will always receive special mention. Mulcahy was in the big money for the first time with the Phillies. He had signed a contract calling for $10,500 but when his number came up in the draft he stepped in line with other American youngsters and went to Camp Edwards.

Casey volunteered for service when he was told that his draft number would soon be called. He is stationed at Fort Constitution in New Hampshire and is occasionally granted a furlough to wrestle.

Draft May End Greenberg's Career

THE DRAFT MAY end Hank Greenberg's career as a major league ball player. Hank will join the colors next month, and he will be in service for at least a year, and possibly longer. Under present War Department plans the service of men in the army would be extended in the event of war. At the conclusion of the emergency, a player of Greenberg's age might find he no longer could make the big league grade.

Hank recognizes his position. He has been a big money maker over the years, and so will have financial security even if he never returns to the big leagues. Greenberg's salary for this year is $50,000. The management of the Detroit club went on record as saying at the time Greenberg's draft status was under discussion that it would pay Hank his full salary even if he were unable to play the entire season.

Greenberg is certain to play ball on one of the army teams during the coming Summer. There are numerous first class ball players stationed at the various camps and the competition between the rival camps in baseball and in other branches of athletics will be keen. A great ball player like Greenberg can do much to lift the morale of service men.

Binghamton Fighters Pace Eastern Loop

By the Associated Press

Usually when a team scores seven runs in one inning the opposition gets flustered and blows up.

But not Binghamton of the Eastern Baseball League. That's probably why the Triplets are in first place with five wins in six starts.

The Trips held a 8-0 lead over Springfield going into the last of the fifth inning yesterday. Then Springfield knocked Johnny Dibiasi out of the box with a seven-run uprising. Only a sensational catch by Third Baseman Bill Johnson with the bases filled prevented more runs. Undismayed, the Trips promptly scored twice in the sixth to win out, 10 to 8.

Williamsport climbed into the .500 class by beating Scranton, 3 to 2. Young Nick Butcher gave up nine bases on balls but was tight in the pinches and benefited from good support. Altogether, Scranton left 12 men stranded. Northey's triple and Richmond's double accounted for the winning run in the eighth.

Elmira took over second place by scoring three runs in the ninth to beat Wilkes-Barre, 4 to 3.

FILM STUNT MAN BERGERE EYES AUTO IRONMAN TITLE

INDIANAPOLIS, April 29 (AP)—Cliff Bergere, tall, dapper Hollywood automobile stunt man, has yet to win the Indianapolis speedway 500-mile race but this year he can become the "iron man" of the famous Hoosier arena of speed.

Bergere, whose bright-colored clothes make him look more like a fashion plate than race driver, needs to drive only 186 miles of the May 30 race to cover more miles on the Indianapolis track than any other man.

And if he only starts he will gain at least a tie for having driven in the most races.

Gray-haired, 44year-old Bergere now has driven 5064 miles at Indianapolis, a figure surpassed only by Louis Meyer of Huntington Park, Cal., who has 5249 miles to his credit. Meyer has retired from competition.

Only two active drivers are older than Bergere, who took up movie stunting because he wrecked so many cars in dirt track racing. Ira Hall of Terre Haute, Ind., soon will be 50. Hepburn is 45.

Bergere has finished in the money five times since his first start in 1927, but never better than third.

This year, he will drive the same car as last year—a four-cylinder job in which the late Floyd Roberts won the 1937 race at the record speed of 117.2 miles an hour.

A leaky oil line forced Bergere out of the 1940 race at 127 miles.

"I just feel that Lady Luck is on my side this year and that's all I need," he said today.

California May Take Over All Race Tracks

SAN FRANCISCO, April 29 (AP)—Jerry Giesler, chairman of the State Racing Commission, said here that the state might take over and operate all horse racing tracks in California.

Discussing racing bills now before the State legislature, Giesler said there was so much greed being shown by certain groups in the racing business, and so much squabbling, that the public might become disgusted.

If the State should take over the tracks it would get 12 per cent of the take, instead of the 4 per cent it now receives, thereby boosting its gross income from $3,500,000 a year to $10,500,000. He did not know how the State would acquire control.

Hero and Goat

HERO—Whitlow Wyatt, who held Cincinnati to six hits and batted in the winning run as Brooklyn beat the Reds, 3 to 2, and gained first place in the National League.

GOAT—Hal Hewhouser, who had Cleveland's Indians held to four hits and a 1-1 deadlock when he lost the plate in the sixth inning, walked two and gave up a pair of hits with two outs so that Cleveland scored three runs and went on to beat the Detroit Tigers, 7 to 2.

10-CENT FARE LOSES

WASHINGTON, April 29 (INS)—The Hudson & Manhattan R. R. lost an appeal to the supreme court for right to charge a 10-cent fare between Hudson Terminal New York, and Jersey City and Hoboken.

Dog Scholars Feature N. H. Show

Probably for the first time in dog show history, a feature that has been shown at only larger dog shows comes to a much smaler one, intact. A "smash" hit at Broadway and Boston shows comes to the Manchester (N. H.) Kennel Club show next Saturday in the form of the New England Dog Training Club exhibition. Selected from all the many similar organizations in the country which operate under the jurisdictionw of the American Kennel Club, the NEDTC is probably the outstanding obedience training club in the country.

Obedience training has for its purpose not to teach dog tricks, but rather to develop the dog into an obedient, useful companion. The results are amazing. Any dog owner who witnesses the exhibition will realize the extent of accomplishment.

The exhibition will be given under the direction of Bert D. Turnquist, training director of the Club, at 7 p. m. in the New Hampshire State Armory, where the dog show is being held from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m.

The exhibition will include dogs of many breeds: Cocker, Shepherd, Schipperke, Great Dane, Doberman Pinscher, Fox Terrier, Welsh Corgi, Irish Setter English Setter, Norwegian Elkhound, Sealyham, Boxer, Dalmatian and English Bulldog; all working together off the leash in remarkable routines. These numbers, designed to show dramatically the purposes and accomplishment of obedience training, show why this sport is the fastest growing one in dogdom today.

Among the numbers that had the New York and Boston audiences cheering were "Manhattan Merry-Go-Round," a series of training manuevers; "Boston Blue Noses," which stopped the show with its "Treasure Hunt" performed by five dogs demonstrating ose work, and "Me and My Shadow" performed by two Irish Setters giving a demonstration of obedience trainaing at its best.

Also "Obedience on the March," precision work; "New England Handicap," a race; "Jumping Jiminies," demonstrating all the jumps, and the "Obstacle Race," which had the crowds laughing. There will also be a salute to the Eastern Dog Club.

COMMONWEALTH C. C. LAYS OUT NEW COURSE

By BILL GRIMES

Along about the first of June, General Manager and Secretary John W. Ferguson Kennedy will send out notices to members and friends of the Commonwealth Country Club to attend the official opening of the new course, which will be approximately 600 yards longer than the present layout.

And after June 15, when the new course will be playable, there'll be no more low and middle 60s carded at the popular Chestnut Hill course, which will then measure slightly more than 6200 yards and will have a 37—35—72 par.

During the first 15 years that the Commonwealth Country Club was in existence its members were so knotted up with "Charlie Horses" and suffered so much from sore feet and fallen arches from climbing up and skidding down hills that they didn't visualize the possibilities of converting their course into a real test of golf. They were contented to allow it to be a physical test.

LAND DEALS

But, about 25 years ago, the older members, who, by that time, had become hardened to mountain climbing and side hill lies, began to regard the area, which jutted into the course, as an eyesore. So they went into action and put through a deal whereby the club acquired the land for the present second and third holes in exchange for the old No. 7 and No. 8. That deal not only improved the course but was a fine investment for the club, which had a surplus after paying for the construction of two new holes.

A couple of months back, the Commonwealth Country Club made another land deal. This time it acquired the property, which, until the bank took it over, was owned by the Country Day School. That parcel of land cost the club $500 plus the land which figured in the trade.

For a week, Greenskeeper Martin J. Tully has had his crew of ground workers revamping Commonwealth. He predicts that the new holes will be playable by the middle of June. And, everyone, including Russ Hale, the club professional, agrees that Commonwealth will be from five to seven strokes harder.

8TH AND 9TH SAME

When the new layout is ready the course will be the same for the first and second holes. But, then, the third hole will play from the present third tee to the present seventh green, a real tough 490-yard par 5. The fourth hole will be the present 12th, another 5 par hole and the fifth will be the one shotter, current No. 13, after which will come the present No. 4 and No. 5. But No. 8 and No. 9 will be the same as now.

Under the new arrangements, the tees at 10 and 11 will be back 25 yards, which will make both holes, particularly NoN. 11, considerably tougher.

From the 11th green, players will walk over to the present No. 6 tee but the new 12th will be a real par 4, for the green will be located in the old Country Day School field 175 yards beyond the present 6th green. Just beyond what is now the 6th green, there'll be an oblong shaped pond but the putting surface will be banked at the rear, which will be a decided improvement on the present green.

13TH HOLE HARDEST

Instead of waiting for the green to grow on the new 12th green, Greenskeeper Tully will transplant the surface of the putting green and the present 6th green will be cut up and laid out on the putting green.

Then will come the toughest hole on the course, the 515 yard par 5 13th. The tee for this hole will be to the left of the 12th green, approximately in the middle of the Country Day School gridiron. The drive will call for a long carry and should be played to the left of the brook, which runs across the present 3d fairway.

The long hitters, if the wind is favorable, can reach the right side of the brook and it will be a gamble. However, regardless of the hitting ability of the player, the second shot will be a full brassie and then it will take at least a No. 6 iron to get home.

The last five holes will be unchanged except the 18th which will be 25 yards longer, but by that time the player will welocme a few soft holes.

The par of the new layout will be:

Out	4	4	5	3	4	5	3	4	—37
In	4	3	4	5	4	4	3	5	3—35—72

Mass. Champ to Drive In Keene, N. H., Race

KEENE, N. H., April 29—Three New England big car auto drivers have entered for next Sunday's opening races of the season at the Safford speedway here.

Bob Gardner, Cohasset, Mass.; Gene Trinque, Mapleville, R. I., and Buddy Hardt, Waterbury, Ct., will pilot cars in the whirl which is scheduled for 10 miles.

Gardner, holder of the Massachusetts big car championship for 1940, is popular with followers of racing in New England.

KISSING THE CLUB that did it—The Detroit Tigers were leading 1-0 in the seventh inning of the game against the Cleveland Indians in Cleveland until Jeff Heath left, connected for a homer with a man on base. The all-around wallop saved the day for Bob Feller, the Indians' pitching pride, right, giving him the victory 2-1 and putting the Indians at the top of the American League. That's why Feller is kissing the cudgel that hit the homer while Hitter Heath grins approval.

HEARST SHOOTERS—The Piscataqua Rifle Club of Portsmouth, N. H., is making a determined bid to capture New England rifle shooting honors in next Sunday's W. R. Hearst Championship finals at the 101st Infantry Armory. Among the Piscataqua marksmen who will be lining their sights on the Hearst Trophy are, left to right, R. A. Nixon, R. C. Margeson, H. W. Williams, Walter B. Redden and D. Caramo.

BENEFIT BOXERS EYE TITLE BOUTS

Hundreds of fight fans from the South Shore will march into the Boston Garden Friday night when such slam-bang performers as Coley Welch, N. E. middleweight champion; Georgie Martin, Tony Shucco, Honey Mellody, Bill Weinberg, Johnny Skhor, John Henry Eskew and several more mix in an all-star scromble for the benefit of the Brockton Fire Fund.

Fifty per cent of the proceeds will be turned over to the fund to aid the families of victims in the recent Brockton theater calamity.

The program, consisting of four 10-rounders and a preliminary six, reads:

Tony Shucco, Boston, vs. Joe O'Gatty, New York, 10 rounds.

Johnny Skhor, Boston, vs. Bill Weinberg, Chelsea, 10 rounds.

Coley Welch, Portland, Me., vs. John Henry Eskew, Brockton, 10 rounds, for the N. E. middleweight title.

George Martin, Boston, vs. Honey Mellody, Charlestown, 10 rounds.

Harold Harris, Malden, vs. Al Sforza, North End, 6 rounds.

None but O'Gatty needs an introduction. He's an iron man heavyweight from N. Y., who has given Joe Louis several tough sessions as a sparring mate and who recently boxed a draw with Lou Nova, the Bomber's No. 1 challenger.

Shucco, looking for a crack at the champion, asked for and got O'Gatty. He hopes to beat him so convincingly that he'll be considered for a championship bout.

Mellody and Martin will be gunning for a crack at the uncrowned welterweight king, Mike Kaplan, who recently walloped the titleholder Fritzie Zivic. Valenti has promised the winner a bout with Kaplan.

Jockey Bribing Now a Felony

ALBANY, N. Y., April 29 (AP)—Bribery of jockeys became a felony in New York State punishable by a maximum prison term of five years and a fine of not more than $10,000 under a bill signed by Gov. Hubert H. Lehman.

The measure also makes it a felony to bribe track owners, trainers, judges, starters, stewards and special policemen.

Two Portsmouth Teams In Hearst Shoot Finals

By WALTER KILEY

Two teams representing the Piscataqua Rifle and Revolver Club, one of the crack rifle shooting organizations of New Hampshire, are coming down from Portsmouth to take a crack at winning the William Randolph Hearst Citizen Markmanship championship at the 101st Infantry Armory next Sunday afternoon.

The Piscataqua teams head for Boston fresh from capturing the New Hampshire State Revolver and Pistol Trophy in the eighth annual gallery rifle championships held in Somersworth a week ago. The trophy which goes to the top-ranking Granite State team was won by the Piscataqua marksmen with a total of 931, five points higher than the record breaking mark which the same club established a year ago.

The Portsmouth sharpshooters have been hanging up title victories since the day back in April of 1930 when a group of sportsmen organized the club and joined up with the now defunct Merrimack Valley Rifle League. Donated rifles were available and before long Piscataqua was a power in New Hampshire shooting circles.

NIXON SETS RACE

Piscataqua has won the Southeastern New Hampshire Rifle League honors six out of the past seven years. Its shooters have won every state pistol championship held at Manchester and the team is currently undefeated in NRA pistol rifle league matches which calls on them to compete against rifle teams from Nevada, Illinois, Tennessee, Massachusetts, New York, Michigan, Idaho, and New Jersey.

Secretary Walter B. Redden writes that Nick Nixon is the present "hot shot" of the team with "his 20-pounds of scrap metals which he calls a rifle." Nixon is high average for the 1941 season in the Southeastern New Hampshire Rifle League.

CAMP PERRY COACH

Bill Norton is former state individual champion; "Snuffy" Williams has been coming fast with a new heavy barrel .52 which is just about broken in and Redden has long been recognized as a crack shot.

Freddie Harmon, club treasurer, heads the team "B" shooters. Arnold Silva is a Camp Perry team member. "Bunk" Redden is another Camp Perry team member. Bill Reynolds is too as well as being last year's high average in the Southeastern N. H. League and this year's runnerup.

"Buck" Jones, executive officer of the club, is alternate. He will coach the teams. It was he who coached the New Hampshire State Camp Perry team.

The Piscataqua teams will represent two of the 16 teams which will wage the battle for the handsome Hearst Trophy.

Athletes on Defense:

Stars Build Airplanes

SANTA MONICA, Cal., April 29 (AP)—Just name your sport, pal, and Douglas Aircraft Co. employes will be glad to call you for marbles, chalk or lettuce.

Former athletes now making Douglas planes in Uncle Sam's defense program include a tackle who put Southern California into the 1940 Rose Bowl; in Intercollegiate A. A. A. A. discus King, and an Olympics swimmer.

Phil Gaspar's point after touchdown was the Trojans' victory margin over Oregon. It gave Southern California a tie with University of California at Los Angeles for the Pacific Coast League football crown. League officials then voted the Trojans into the Bowl—here they chucked Tennessee.

Speaking of passes, there was that goal to goal pitch and run in 1932 on which U. C. L. A. floated to a 7-6 victory over Oregon. Ransome (Pants) Livesay, who caught it and ploughed mud 70 yards to score on the game's final play, is with Douglas.

GRIDMEN, FIGHTER

Other gridders on Douglas' payroll include Howard Cleveland, halfback with Kansas State and the Los Angeles pro Bulldogs; Cecil Mulleneaux, center eight years with Green Bay's Powerhouse Packers, and Cal Clemens, one of the best blocking backs produced at Southern Cal.

Wanta fight? Goldie Hess, who met five world champions in his lightweight boxing career and quit to protect a bad eye, has been out here two years. He rates Bud Taylo: the toughest guy he ever fought. The other ring kings were Barney, Ross, Tod Morgan, Jackie Berg and Tony Canzoneri.

Oh yes, that Olympic swimmer was Tom Von Blankenburg, member of the 1928 team.

Return to Gaspar a minute. He threw the discus 159 feet to win the I. C. A. A. A. championship in 1939. Another trackman is Norman Hickerson, former California U. hurdler.

AND LEE ON JOB

Something less strenuous? Ralph Evans, runnerup in last year's Southern California tourney, will take you on a round of golf or or Ernie Soest, rated the best kegler in Southern California, is ready for a gae of 10 pins.

Dudley Lee, former Red Sox and Coast League infielder, and Frank Rieber, erstwhile Portland and Coast League catcher, can give the boys a few tips on the diamond sport.

Then there's Jack Reed, captain of the 1932 California U. basketball team; Clark Shaughnessy, Jr., son of Stanford's big "T" man, and Freddie Gilmore, 15 years a boxing referee.

CORNELL SETS LEAGUE PACE BUT TRAILS IN STATISTICS

NEW YORK, April 29 (AP)—Although Cornell is leading the Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League with four victories in five starts, the Big Red team in second to Yale in batting and fourth in fielding, the season's first statistical roundup showed today.

Yale, tied with Penn at two victories and one defeat, has hit at a .340 clip so far, and Cornell .262. The Elis also lead in fielding with a .973 average, compared with Cornell's .944.

The Elis also have most of the individual leaders. In the batting competition for the Charles H. Elair but Yale's Howie Kaye is first among the regulars with a .600 average. Gerry Besse of Yale and Capt. Stan Pearson of Princeton are tied for second with .500 each. Although four pitchers have records of one victory and no defeats, leaders among those who are credited with more than one decision are Yale's Ted Harrison and Cornell's Walt Sickles, each with two games won and one lost.

Other batting leaders include Lou Bufalino, Cornell, .467; Joe Wood, Jr., Yale, .429; John Burns, Dartmouth, .400; Arnold Beinstein, Pennsylvania, .385; James Carton, Yale, .364; Frank Reagan, Penn, .364; Frank Finneran, Cornell, .353, and Paul Governali, Columbia, .353. Reagan, Governali and John Orr of Dartmouth are tied for the lead in the base stealing competition for the Princeton A. A. Cup with three steals apiece.

Soldiers to Root For 'Crusher'

Today Priv. Steve Casey, U. S. Army, stationed at Fort Constitution, Portsmouth, N. H., may be practicing aiming big artillery guns, but on tomorrow night about 10 o'clock he will be hoping to aim his Kerry Flip well when he clashes with Pantaleon Manlapig, champion of the Philippine Islands and rated as one of the front running contenders for the world's title.

Quite a delegation including officers and men from the Portsmouth fort will come down to Boston for the bout and Steve will not be lacking in vocal support, if that will help him any. And those soldier boys can really cheer when they put their mind to it.

In a special bout Lord Albert Mills clashes with George Macricostas while the semi-final will be between Lou Plummer and Leo Numa.
